A MERRY

CHRISTMAS

Give F. S. Burgess a Call!

We wish in all homes might be joy and delight, Children be merry and the hearth fires burn bright Yet while there are some will be happy and gay, Others will miss those who have gone far away. And we know in some homes the heart will be sad, Struggling with poverty, their children ill clad; O, ye that have plenty, remember the poor; Their burdens are many and hard to endure.

In some homes to-day will be sorrow and gloom, For dear ones laid away in the silent tomb; They miss the sweet voice, there's a vacant chair, And the home is lonely, for they are not there. But we hear a voice from the angels above, Weep not, for thy dear ones were called by His love, Their pains are over, they will sorrow no more, You will meet them again on the other shore.

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad inste, coated tongue, and irregular beauting of the bowds, are some of the more common after a symptoms. Dysepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, presistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathons of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind. "I have been troubled with dyspepsia, I had but little appetite, and what I did eat Heart-burn after eating I would experience a faintness, or tred, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsa Stomaci. Tilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetitic, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." Geonce A. I hear men say that the active participation of woman in public affairs would hurt her delicacy. No! Whatever thing on God's earth a woman's conscience tells her to do, she can do, though she stood in the gates of hell, and be every particle a woman just as much.—Henry Ward Beecher.

In the four new States, particularly in the Dakotas, there are thousands of male Indians, some of whom are still wearing war paint and feathers. But they are welcomed as voters, upon the easy condition of taking lands in severalty, and there is no question of their right to be admitted to the ballot-Intelligent women of the nev States sought in vain for the right so freely accorded to these Indian men.

Would it not be wiser to make character and intelligence, rather than sex, the basis of suffrage?—LUCY STONE.

It is surprising that the great body of American women can rest contented in utter ignorance of the affairs of their country. Women are already voting in more than a dozen States on school matters, and it is only a matter of time when they will be invested with full suffrage. And if women were never to vote in America, they will always be when they will be invested with full suffrage. And if women were never to vote in America, they will always be the mothers of voters. For mothers to abjectly renounce all hold upon their sons when they arrive at the voting age, and to scornfully refuse to acquire the information that would enable them wisely to advise them at critical periods, is to win the contempt of the young men. For women to be indifferent and ignorant when their own affairs are the subject of legislation, and laws are being formulated concerning their property and their children, their advice in the matter not asked, nor their adprovad sought, is to justify the category in which women are frequently menitoned—"women, children, and idiots."

George William Curtis says: "I have no superstition about the ballot. I do not suppose it would immediately right all the wongs of women, any more than it has righted all those of men. But what political agency has righted so many? Here are thousands of miserable men all around us; but they have every path open to them. They have their advocates; they have their votes; they make the laws, and, at last and at worst, they have their

They have every path open to them. They have their accounts; they make the laws, and, at last and at worst, they lave their strong right hands for defense. And here are thousands of miserable women pricking back death and dishonor with a little needle; and now the sly hand of science is stealing that little needle away. The ballot does not make those men happy nor respectable nor rich nor noble; but they guard it for themselves with sleepless jealously, because they known it is the golden gate to every opportunity; and precisely the kind of advantage it gives to one sex it would give to the other. It would arm it with the most powerful weapon known to political society; it would arm it with the most powerful weapon known to political society; it would maintain the natural balance of the sexes in human affairs, and secure to each fair play within its sphere."

How the Trout Was Caught.

Otis Goddard of East Hill walked into Blakesley, Penn., the other day to have his oxen shod. While waiting in the blacksmith shop the brawny young have his oxen shod. While waiting in the blacksmith shop the brawny young backwoodsman told this fish story, declaring that Jack Hayner, who was with him when he caught the trout, would swear to every word of his statement. For months Goddard had tried to land a wily old trout that lurked in one of the deep pools in Tolyhanna Creek. He had angled, he said, with flies, grasshoppers, worms, minnows and other kinds of bait, but he couldn't get the big trout to notice any of them. He had seen the cunning speckled fellow time and again and he wanted him ever the contract of the couldn't get the big trout to notice any of them. No day in July be caught a little deer mouse in the pasture, and he stuck his hook through the loose skin on the mouse's neck and threw it into the pool. It was a lively swimmer, but it hadn't swam six feet before the trout gobbled it with a dash that sent his snout out of the water. That was an unfortunate move for the trout, because within five seconds Goddard had him flopping on dry land, with his hat over the fighting beauty. The trout weighed two pounds and fourteen ounces Goddard declared.

LUNCHES FOR SALESWOMEN

low Some of the Large Stores Provide for Their Employes.

With no one is the lunch question to important as with the proprietors of the large dry goods stores. The army of clerks must eat, they must eat regularly, and they ought to eat well, in order to be able to stand their fatiguing work. At the same time business must be attended to, for the customers some at all hours, lunch or no lunch, it would be impossible to allow the clerks to go out of the stores for their lunches, because they would lose too much time; they have to be at their posts like the soldier. There is a strict discipline in all large dry good stores and a certain daily routine, and these are kept up rigidly, and the one who offends would in vain ask for mercy. Nothing makes a woman more hungry than speaking constantly for a length of time, and if to this is added the fatigue of standing for several hours, it is not to be wondered that the dry goods clerks greet that hour of lunch with rapture. It is the only time during the whole day when they are allowed to put aside their business mask, and take off the harness of their daily toil. Then they are not forewomen, or salesmen or cash girls; they are ordinary human beings who have a right to laugh and talk, to eat and drink without pleasing any one but themselves.

The lunch hour is the only time during the working day they may rest their weary limbs without neglecting their duties. The ordinary lunch time is between 12 and 2 oclock, but all girls cannot leave their posts at once. They usually go one or two at a time, for it would hardly do to spare more than that number from the same counter. The forewoman who is responsible for the order and discipline in her department sends them according to how they can be spared.

Many of the large dry goods stores have a room off the warerooms where the clerks can take their lunches, and all by themselves, away from the business. A good many of the girls bring their lunches from home; of course, they are cold and consist of sandwiches, cakes, fruit, etc. If they desire something warm they make a cup of tea or ten or coffee party, and sometimes divide their lunches to procure some variety.

If they have money to spare and feel like eating some dessert they send one of the errand boys to a neighboring baker store for cakes or sweets. Some girls also send for a restaurant lunch and divide one portion in two parts. They can thus get a good lunch for two for twenty-five or thirty cents. But in dry goods stores where the proprietor feels responsible for his employes' welfare he provides a hot lunch for all those of his clerks who desire it. It mostly consists of soup, tea, coffee, three or four different kinds of meat, vegetables, and bread and but ther. The clerks are waited on properly and order what their palates desire and their purses can stand. They are good lunches, well cooked, substantial and very cheap. One or two of these stores are said to serve lunches as good as regular dinners. Ten to fifteen cents pays for a lunch for which the customer of a high priced restaurant would pay from forty to fifty cents. The proprietor makes nothing out of it; it is done solely to accommodate the clerks.

It would be very good if all owners of large dry goods stores would do the same for their employes, for it is weary and fatiguing work to stand, work and talk in a store from 8 o'clock in the morning until 6 in the evening.

The Nicaragua Canal.

The Nicaragua canal will be 170 miles long from ocean to ocean. There will be 16 miles of excavation on the cast side, 11½ miles on the west, ½ miles for six locks, making a total of 28 miles. Free navigation will be had in the San Juan river for 64½ miles, and in lake Nicaragua for 56½ miles. There will be no space for vessels to pass each other in opposite directions in all parts except in the rock cuttings. The time of the passage is estimated at 28 hours. 28 hours.

WOMEN IN PRISON

the Poor Creatures Gratify the es That Seem to Be Second Nature. How the Poor Creatures Graffy the Tastes That Seem to Be Second Nature.

Compulsion is the woman convict's drop of bitterness. The complete mortification of that harmless sort of vanity which fills so much of a woman's life, makes her durance doubly vile. All her fine feathers are sacrificed ruthlessly. Her hair, which she has apostolic authority for regarding as an ornament, is shorn of its 2sst lock as soon as her cell has been allotted to her, and the face which has gazed with perfect passiveness, almost for rouse a country's admiration, and the tongue that has been mute under the finding of jury and sentence of judge, are raised to plead pathetically with the holder of the scissors, while the corridors sometimes ring again to the piercing cries for a sparing pity as the inexorable shearers gather their harvest of curls.

But swing returns, and the hair re-dors sometimes ring again to the piereing cries for a sparing pity as the inexorable shearers gather their harvest of curls.

But spring returns, and the hair renews itself, and before the next shearing day the girls grumble that a thoughtless administration provides them with no hairpins. One woman, whose hair continued to be suspiciously resplendent, as of macassar, after weeks of incarceration, was an object of some wonderment, even to the chaplain, until she explained to him in confidence that she allowed her broth to cool, and then skimmed off the fat to glitter in her crown of glory.

Another girl certainly rouged, and rouge tells effectively on the pallor of prison confinement. Great was the envious indignation of her sisters in servitude against a frivolity so unattainable, but greater still, perhaps, was the curiosity to discover how the accomplishment of such a frivolity could be attained. At length it was discovered that the red shreds woven among the blue shirts which she had to sew would, when drawn out and chewed, yield the bloom yearned after by the check of beauty.

The manner in which nearly every woman finds it possible to disarrange and double one of her underskirts and present the fascinations of a crinolette is so comic that it has been known to wring a smile from that gravest among men—a prison chaplain. And a woman without a looking glass! Only the austerest and severest orders of nuns renounce that. And perhaps it is the female prisoner's most oppressive penance, for the relief of which she is even willing to risk the imposition of extra punishment—a task the more, a meal the less.

By an accident, which she declares she will regret for a lifetime, she has broken a window. The hole is there, sure enough, but where is the detached glass. Days after this is found concealed in a corner of her cell, and behind it a strip of dark cloth, her substitute for quicksilver. And all for what? There are no male hearts to break and few males eye to see—only those of governor, chaplain and doctor.—San Young Philosopher.

A Lewiston little boy declared a philosophic independence and accepted the consequences in so matter of fact a way last week that it may make a story; even if it is not so funny. His mother dressed him up in a new flamnel shirt Friday and sent him to school. The shirt irritated his cuticle, or in other words he itched. When he came home that night he was cross and very cross for so small a boy, and he declared he and the flannel had parted company forever.

The next morning, as his mother prepared to dress him for school the boy drew the line at the shirt. "No," said he, "I don't wanter wear that shirt." A brief debate ensued, in which the boy appeared to have formed his opinion and to have decided to stick to it. The question when put to the house was carried by the

The Eye as a Power.

"Did you ever try the power of magnetism as expressed through the eye" asked a friend of mine at the theatre recently. "It's interesting. I've been developing the faculty of late and have great fun over it. Last week as I sat over there on the side aisle of the parquet circle I saw several rows of chairs ahead of me a young lady of my acquaintance. She was sitting so that she would have to turn clear around to look at me, and I thought it a good chance to test my power. I called the attention of my companion to her and said: 'Now watch me make her look around.' Then I concentrated my gaze on the back of her bonnet and my mind on the idea of controlling her action. By and by she began to look around the house rather nervous-ly, glancing everywhere, and then she turned clear around and looked straight into my eyes. I met her afterward and told her about it, and she told me that she didn't know what caused her to do so unusual a thing. Now there's an acquaintance of mind own there in the parquet—that man slouched down in his seat with gray hair and a bald spot—see me make him so looked at the bald spot intently for five minutes without making it wince. Then he frowned ominously and his sage grew more piercing. Still no effect. After fifteen minutes of this he agave it up, saying the man never had any mind anyway. At the close of the performance an usher went down and awakened the man with the bald spot. He had been asleep.—Chicago Times.

When a Russian Beggars.

When a Russian peasant falls into temporary difficulties he puts a wallet over his shoulder, goes out among the neighboring villages and gets it speedily filled with what is knowns a "morsels." He enters every house but makes no formal request; only the mistress of the house feels the meaning of the wallet and drops a morsel into it silently behind his back, and she will do so though the morsel be her last and her own hurband be obliged to assume the beggar's wallet himself on the morrow. The touching and respectful tenderness of the poor for the poor is a natural encouragement to the professional beggar, and there are whole villages in Russia where the people, every man of them, in addition to their occupations as owners and cultivators of land, have for generations practiced beggary as their regular auxiliary trade.

On a single estate in Moscow province there are fifty-two of these beggar villages, containing among them as many as 4,348 able bodied men possessing their "soul" (share) of land apiece, and these men, because their forefathers had their houses burned by the French in 1812, and went round collecting the means of rebuilding them, still set off every summer after seed time, and beg their way in tens and twenties through the richer districts of the south till next harvest, though it appears that the business is now very much less lucrative than it used to be in consequence of the growing impoverishment of their patrons.

But much graver forms of pauper-ism have recently begun to invade Russia than those curious beggar ar-tels. In proportion to population more persons receive public relief at present in St. Petersburg than in any other European capital. Professor Janson, a Russian statistician of con-siderable authority, has calculated that about a fourth of the population of the city—229,000 out of 876,000—got relief in 1884.—Montreal Star.

"Must we all die, mamma," she asked, as the sympathetic tears filled her eyes.

"Yes, dear."

"I don't want to die, mamma," she went on plaintively.

"But I do, darling," said her mother.
"I want to die and go to heaven."

"Well, then, I guess I do," said the little one thoughtfully. What is heaven, mamma?"

"Oh, it is a beautiful place, the most beautiful you could think of; where the streets are all bright with gold, and there are angels, and such ore."

"Wanted, a new fur!" is said to be the cry. Why not call some of the old ones by their right names? That would sell them, and the sale's the thing, after all. There seems to be weeping and wailing for novelty ir more than one trade. The jewelers assert that they cannot obtain anything actually new, and that last year's styles are offered them by the manufacturers; and the stationers bring out venerable patterns, and smile calmly if one remonstrate. All this means that by and by some genius will bring out some absurd little trifle, and capture everybody with it. The Parisex-position was going to make things very lively, but it seems to have produced stagnation. Perhaps 1892 will avenge us. By the way, the new fur collars, which are as prettily mottled as chinchilla, but as lustrous as grebe, are made of prepared catskin. They are very becoming and elegant, and adjust themselves to the figure much better than heavier furs.—Boston Transcript.

Teaching Sewing.

The most disagreeable part of the sewing teacher's task now lies in the necessity of giving instruction to each child singly, but an English woman has invented a frame in which an enlarged model garment may be placed before a glass and held in position in such a manner as to show precisely how every stitch is made. This makes it as easy to teach sewing as it is to teach writing, and so reduces the time required for instruction as to give more opportunity for cultivating the mind.—Montreal Star.

The cause of his sudden death seemed to be a combination of circumstances. The death of his sister in the Nate of New York a few weeks since called him away from home to attend the funeral, after which he was attacked by the now prevailing influenza. These with the recent labor trouble in the city and over sexertion in being present at the meeting of Republican members on Tucsday (Wednesday, developed the affection of the heart which terminated the life at 12.30 o'clock Friday morning last, of one who, without doubt, would have proved a valued member of this body.

Mr. Conway says: "In the combin Mr. Conway says: "In the combina-tion of forces against woman suffrage, one of the strongest is the belief of men generally that the political world is so corrupt and mean that women would be degraded by having any part in it." If the men who now manage our politics are too bad to vote with our politics are too bad to vote with women, they are too bad to vote for women, they are too bad to vote for women—too bad for women to be governed by them. It must be remembered that women's closest interests are bound up in the question of good or bad government—their personal security, their taxes, the removal of nuisances from before their doors, the exposure of their children to good or bad influences, physical and moral, in the schools and in the streets. It is idle to say that the political world is idle to say that the political world is too bad for women to touch it, when it inevitably touches women at so many points. It is as if a man, in a mistaken points. It is as if a man, in a mistaken spirit of chivalry, should refuse to let his wife lift a hand to do any house-cleaning, on the ground that the house was too dirty for her to touch it, and at the same time should expect her to go on living in that same dirty hor To say that women can purify politics better by abstract moral disapprobation than by voting for good men and against bad ones, is like saving that a against oud ones, is the saving that a woman could accomplish the cleansing of her house more effectually by frowning at the dirt than by taking a mop in in her hand.—Alice Stone Blackwell, in Woman's Cycle.

Mrs. Alice Scatcherd, one of the English delegates to the Women's International Council held last year in Washington, has just accomplished an excellent piece of work as a mediator between employers and employed. A serious strike was threatened lately near her home at Morley amongst the weavers. Mrs. Scatcherd believed that in this instance the men were wrong, and she set to work to avert the threatened strike. She spent days in the homes of the weavers; two evenings were passed with the manager of some enormous mills, and a meeting was called of the men and women whose interests were involved. Mrs. Scatcherd's long experience and her well-known sympathy with working people gave her influence with them, and the end of it was, they went back to work. But for her, $5,000 per week in wages would have been stopped.

In 6,000 years you have sixty centuries. In each century you may out a cemetery for one generation. It will be a huge estimate to give to every man, woman and child a grave five feet by two, or ten square feet. A obviously enormously large. The estimate of the size of each grave is very large. A strictly correct estimate would reduce the size of the required

Estimating that a large man can stand on two square feet, and the average standing room of a crowd of men, women and children is one and a half square feet, he calculates that 8,000,000 people can stand on a square nile. According to this the popula-ion of the world could stand on 84

Then he makes this curious sugges-Then he makes this curious suggestion:

"Carry your arithmetic still further. You laid out a cemetery for the 1,500,000,000 of mankind now living. Build a city for them to dwell in. Average families at five persons to a family, and give each family a house and lot 20 feet by 100. Your cemetery gave five persons fifty square feet for graves. Their city lot is forty times as large. Your city lot must therefore be forty times as large as your cemetery. Add 20 per cent, for good streets."

On this basis the population of the world could live in a city 100 miles wide and 220 miles long, and have twice the space per capita now being occupied by the majority of people in our great cities.—Dr. Prince in Journal of Commerce.

A Stone Man in a Cavera.

In blasting at the Minnie mine, on Aspen mountain, a beautiful cave was discovered. The walls were covered with crystalized lime, and lead and stalactites projected from the ceiling. A party was startled to find in one chamber a petrifled man with a flint ax and bowl at his side. Other stone men were found, all in the same position. They were seated with their heads on their knees and arms clasped around their legs. In attempting to lift the nummies the men broke off the arms and discovered that the figures would crumble unless tenderly handled.—London Edition New York Herald. A Stone Man in a Cavern.

of hundreds, beside the destruction of the monument.

A huge crowd assembled to watch the operation. To prevent confusion, an edict had been issued forbidding any one, on pain of death, to speak, or even make any noise. The signals to work and rest were to be given by the sound of trumpets.

The silence of death reigned over the vast concourse as the first signal sounded, and the machines began to work, and the levers to creak and bend under the great pressure. The obelisk work, and the machines began to work, and the levers to creak and bend under the great pressure. The obelisk rose steadily, surely. At first easily, then with greater and greater difficulty, until it was within a few lines of the perpendicular.

Men and beasts exerted themselves to the utmost, but the cables refused to work farther. It was a moment of despair. All seemed lost, when a brave sailor boy, perched aloft, risked his life and all by calling out in the dead silence, "Wet the ropes!"

The word was an inspiration. The architect and master workmen saw it at once. As if the voice of the sailor boy had electrified them, they wet the ropes, which contracted, and the obelisk was raised to the upright position it has held ever since. It is needless to add that the prayers of the people procured the pardon of the sailor.—Youth's Companion.

Blood Oranges.

The blood orange is a mere variety of the sweet orange, obtained by cultivation, and appears first to have been raised by the Spanish gardeners in the Philippine Islands, from the capital of which (Manila) it, together with the well known cigars, formed at one time one of the chief articles of export. On its first appearance in Europeitex, on the strict a considerable sensation, and in the last century very high prices were demanded for the tree which bore the wonderful fruit. None, however, now come to us from Manila—our supply being derived almost entirely from Malta, where great pains and attention are bestowed upon their cultivation. It was for a long time supposed, and indeed the idea is not yet quite extinct, that blood oranges were produced by the grafting of the orange with the pomegranate, but there is not the slightest foundation for this belief.—Chambers's Journal.

with other arts and sciences, has made wonderful advances. Ten years ago such a thing as extracting or filling teeth by an electrical process was unknown, but now it is quite generally used. This method is considered infinitely superior in every way to that of using anæstheties. The latter has in many cases proved fatal to the patient, and from that fact are not regarded in a pleasant light. Whereas, electricity is perfectly harmless and can be used with safety even upon a child. In what is termed bridge work we have also made progressive strides, and a set of teeth can now be fitted to the mouth without the necessity of a plate being fitted or joined to the roof. The wonderful art of inserting an artificial porcelain crown to the teeth can be also regarded as a great idea, from the fact of its giving to the tooth a perfectly natural appearance.—Dentist in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

One of the most terrible tragedies in modern life was that of an American poet, who, when a foolish, sensitive young man, met and married a middle aged woman of great beauty, but unsuited to be his wife, not only by her age, but by the difference between her tastes and her character and his.

The sequel was a life for him of hopeless misery, ending in a wretched death.

It is right that the young men and women for whom The Companion aims to be a faithful friend should understand the full significance of such a story. How many of them, when scarcely past childhood, have formed foolish attachments for unworthy or uncongenial objects, and are now wretched because of their fear that these attachments and their own de-

A botanist, on being asked the mean-

A botanist, on being asked the meaning of this phenomenon, replied, "is merely an outbreak of strength, as purposeless as the plunge of a colt or the shrill cries of a young bird before it has learned to sing."

Whether this be true or not, it is certain that the young human plant is apt to put forth rank growths of affection in the vigor of its new and untried life which do not belong to its real nature of after development. School girls fancy themselves "in love" with vulgar men whom they scarcely know; college boys think they have found their mates for life in women far beyond them in years and far behind them in education. They believe this devotion on their part will be eternal.

It is but the unwholesome fog of the morning, that will vanish before the sunshine of the pure love which is God's highest blessing on earth to woman or to man.

The Companion speaks plainly, be-

The Companion speaks plainly, because this subject is one of which all readers think, secretly or openly, and because these false, unnatural attachments in early years have wrecked myriads of fair young lives.—Youth's Companion.

The London Zoo.

The London Zee.

In 1876 the present magnificent building known as the lion house was completed, and the lions and tigers were transferred to it. This is one of the finest and best arranged houses that have ever been constructed for the use of wild animals that come from a warm climate. The general temperature of the building can be maintained at a height suited to the requirements of the animals, while the warmth can be increased, if necessary, in their sleeping compartments. There is an admirable arrangement by which the wild beasts can be let out into the large open framed cages on the north side of the building. Through the passage behind the dens there runs a raised tramway, along which an iron case or box, with doors at each end of it, can travel so as to form a tunnel over the passage, to enable any animal to pass from its ordinary den into the open compartment outside. This tunnel case can be moved along the tramway from den to den as occasion requires.

The chief difficulty lies in giving a lion or tiger his first lesson in the use of the tunnel. At first he fears a trapor some unknown danger; but when he has at last quietly stolen out into the open air, which seems to provide a chance of escape, though he may find his expectation of escaping frustrated, he soon learns the pleasure of the greater liberty and space afforded him, and he rolls on the ground in lappiness, or stretches himself up against a tree, on which he cleans and sharpens his claws. He may sometimes be seen intently staring at some distant object. He has caught sight of a deer or an eland, and his natural love of the chase revives, though he takes little notice of the numerous human beings surrounding the cage.—

Another Kind of Rat.

The Lewiston (Me.) Journal tells a story about a West Minot farmer who, to save a choice barrel of apples in his cellar from the depredation of rats, as he supposed, set two traps in the barrel. It appears, however, that it was a female member of his family who had a fondness for the fruit. Happening in the cellar the morning after the farmer had set the traps, she started to help herself as usual. Imagine her suprise. On putting her hand in the barrel she found herself caught in a steel trap. In her attempts to free her hand she put the other one in the barrel, and, as luck would have it, put it directly into the jaws of the other trap, thus getting both hands caught. As there was no one in the house at the time, her cries for help were not heard for some time. When aid arrived the lady had nearly fainted with pain. Another Kind of Rat.

Kate Field Swindled.

Several years ago Miss Kate Field, the authoress, visited Atchison, says The St. Joseph Herald. While there she made the acquaintance of a prominent business man, who believing that she had some ready money, portrayed to her the profit she would reach by buying a lot in that city. He induced her to purchase, the price being $3,000. She paid $1,000 down and the balance was to come in payments. It turned her to purchase, the price being $3,000. She paid $1,000 down and the balance was to come in payments. It turned out afterward that the lot really belonged to the man who induced her to buy, although he had represented differently. The editor of The Herald met Miss Field in San Diego nearly two years ago, when she related the story of her Atchison purchase, described the location of the property, and said she had received a letter from a friend not to meet the second payment, as the property was not then and never had been worth more than $1,000, the amount she had already paid. We were requested to investigate the matter for her and did so. We had two of the best reliable men in Atchison value the property. One placed the value less than $1,000; the other thought it might be worth $1,200. We advised Miss Field to lose the $1,000 she had paid down rather than pay the $2,000 yet due. This is the true story of Miss Field's real estate deal in Atchison. The deal was a clear swindle for which the city of Atchison was in no way responsible, but perpetrated by a man of prominence who claimed respectability. ____ A Gilroy (Cal.) debating societ has decided that Lady Macbeth was a

CRAWFORD SHOE STORES:

A Flag for Christ. A few years ago, a converted Sikh lay dying at Amritsar, in the Punjaub India. Before he passed triumphantly India. Before he passed triumphantly into glory, he expressed his desire to put up a flag for Christ, and left some money for the purpose. Today a flag waves in the gentle breezes above the houses of that city, bearing simply the words, "for Christ," in bold letters on a scarlet ground. That bright flag seemed to us a monument of the grace and mercy of God, who could transform an idolator into a saint; and also a glad prophecy of the future when all a glad prophecy of the future when a nations shall own the sovereignty our coming King. The New State headquarters of the Pennsylvania W. C. T. U. have beer formally dedicated and opened. The rooms are in a new and handsom

A Whistling Tree.

The musical or whistling tree is found in the West Indian islands, in Nubia and the Soudan. It has a peculiar shaped leaf, and pods with a split or open edge. The wind passing through these gives out the sound which gives the tree its peculiar name. In Barbadoes there its peculiar name. In Barbadoes there is a valley filled with these trees, and when the trade winds blow across the island a constant moaning, deep toned whistle is heard from it, which, in the still hours of the night, has a very weird and unpleasant effect.

A species of acacia, which grows very abundantly in the Soudan, is also called the "whistling tree" by the natives. Its shoots are frequently, by the agency of the larvae of insects, distorted in shape and swollen into a globular bladder, from one to two inches in diameter. After the insect has emerged from a circular hole in the side of this swelling, the opening, played upon by the wind, becomes a musical instrument, equal in sound to a sweet toned flute.—St. Louis Republic.

Fogg's Oversight.

Fogg entered the car (says The Boston Transcript) to find every seat occupied and the aisle filled with standes. But he was equal to the occasion. He shouted with the voice of one having authority: "Plenty of seats in the next car." Instantly there was a rush for the next car. The standing passengers started first of course, but their were lots of the sitters who wanted to sit together and several more who thought by going into the other car they might get two or three seats to themselves. The result was that Fogg selected one of the vacated seats, and was deep in his newspaper by the time the crowd came pouring back, with an evident desire to shed Fogg's blood. You see, it was an oversight on Fogg's part. There were plenty of seats in the next car; he merely forgot to mention that they were full.

In these days of fraud and chicanery, when to obtain wealth and popularity so many men will even peril their own touls, caring for naught but their own temporal advancement, it is truly encouraging to review such a life as that just closed, for it reviews our faith in human nature to behold a record above suspicion and without reproach.

Out-door Work for Women.

Celia B. Whitehead writes to the Celia B. Whitehead writes to the New York World relative to woman's work: It does not follow that, because a woman works out of doors and has scant clothing, she must be more miserable than her sister, who, weighted with heavy skirts, does her work shut away from the life-giving air of heaven. A broom, a wash-tub, a flat-iron, a cook-store, a swija-machine and mill. cook-stove, a sewing-machine and mill machinery are not so much less to isome than the hoe, the plough and the cart as might be imagined from the hue and cry raised about women doing the work of men and beasts. I once hired a German woman who had not been long in this country to do washing and ir ing for me. On the third week brought home the clothes and said: cannot wash and iron; it is too hard; it make my back too much ache; I

Woman Suffrage Papers.

Weman Suffrage Papers.

A few years ago the Woman's Journal was the only paper in this country specially devoted to the rights of women. Now there are the Woman's Tribunes, of Washington, the Woman's Standard, organ of the Iowa Woman Suffrage Association: the Wisconsin Citizen, organ of the Wisconsin Suffrage Society; the Woman's Chronicle, of Little Rock, Arkansas; Equality, published in Sinelairville, N. Y.; while hundreds of local papers publish a weekly column full of the news of this movement. The Chicago Inter-Ocean, with its immunesse circulation, East and West, has a "Woman's Kingdom" department in its Saturday issue, which carries great weight in favor of woman suffrage. The Springfield Republican, one of the ablest papers in New England, vigorously supports the political rights of women, and in every Monday issue it has one or two admirably edited columns "Concerning Women and the Field of their Activity." The Boston Transcript, Globe, and Traveller are always friendly. So are many other papers.

In England, for many years, the Woman's Review were the only suffrage papers that kept up a steady and able advocacy of the parliamentary suffrage, after municipal woman suffrage in England and Scotland was achieved. Now we have there a new, bright paper—The Woman's Penny Paper.

In France we have Le Droit des Femmes and La Citoyenne; in Italy, La Donna; in Australia, The Dawn, while three papers, one in Finland, one in Sweden, and one in Norway, are stirring up those countries on the question.

FALLING LEAVES.

They are dropping, slowly dropping— Embers from the flaming trees— All their radiance and splendor, Kindled by the sunshine tender And the wayward breeze.

They are coming, swiftly coming— Amber, amethyst and pearl— With the ties of nature riven, Tempest tossed and madly driven, Flashing luster back ro heaven In their giddy whirl.

They are flitting—gayly flitting— Fledglings of autumnal light— From their lofty perches straying, With each passing zephyr playing, Bough and bush the course delaying Of their final flight.

They are hovering—gently hovering Over vale and rugged steep; Covering o'er the bloomlit spaces Which the early frost defaces Mantling tenderly the places Where our loved ones sleep. Yes, they're falling—sadly falling— Russet, crimson, gold and gray— Beauteous millions headlong flying, With the wind's discordant sighing, At our feet ignobly lying, Waiting dread decay,

They are teaching—filly teaching—
That which gladdens—that which grieves;
There is naught of earth abiding,
But, behind all nature hiding,
Is a hand our footsteps guiding
And the railing leaves.

The Claim That It Is Caused by But Four Things—The Prematurely Gray.

The Claim That it is Caused by But Four Things—The Prematurely Gray.

One great question which the men of the present day ask, which has been propounded frequently, is how can the hair be prevented from becoming white. The case is generally urged that the inquirer is too young to yet have gray hair and wishes only to have hair in accordance with his age and facial appearance. To quote from one letter verbatim will give a clear view of the disturbing matter:

"There are a great many men in St. Louis who note with dismay an abundant amount of hair and even the mustache or beard becoming gray, when the face is yet youthful. A natural desire, with nothing of vanity in it, would lead most of the men to dye or color the hair were it not that they are afraid to use the dyes generally known, because usually they contain substances of a poisonous nature."

Why a person turning gray prematurely should desire to change the hair seems an enigma. Silver hair with a young and fresh face is only an added beauty, especially if the eyes are dark. Novelists have chosen their favorite heroines and heroes with the prematurely gray hair as the most pronounced and distinguished in appearance. "Vashti" in her first youth with silver hair was supposed to win all hearts, and to become very local and practical some of the very best looking men in St. Louis, as well as women, have their faces crowned by silver hair.

women, have their faces crowned by silver hair.

There are three things which cause gray hair; they are brains, neuralgia and old age—oh! and a fourth, too; fear or distress. One of the brightest, sweetest faces in this city is that of a gifted woman whose wealth of hair turned white in one single night. She was to have been married; the guests rrived, the beautiful girl, in her bridal robes, awaited the coming of the bridegroom; hours passed by and the bridegroom came not. The guests departed and the brideshut herself in her room alone. In the morning her dark parted and the brideshut herself in her room alone. In the morning her dark hair had become perfectly white. Such a strange, strange sight; the beautiful girlish face with its wealth of spotless hair. She has never since that night mentioned the subject. Whether she has heard from her delinquent fiance cannot be ascertained, at least outside her relatives, but she is brave and beautiful and took up her burden of life fearlessly.

beautiful and took up her burden of life fearlessly.

There is no way of intercepting gray hair except from the absence, as before said, of brains, neuralgia, fear or old age. When it does come, only an ar-titicial means can change it to the former hue, and dyes are mostly dan-gerous.

Gray hair at least is not the sign of decreasing energy, and the gray laired beaux of society are usually the most active and often the greatest favorites. Another feature of gray hair is that it is generally fine hair, and a silver head of hair is generally an abundant one.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Mottoes for Sun Dials.

Dials live over into this age of cheap clocks and watches not by reason of their use or convenience, but because of their associations. They were formerly designed with taste and bore inscriptions suited to their purpose. Many of these are historic, as the one that used to be at Paul's Cross in London, which said, in Latin, "I number none but sunny hours."

An old fashioned dial in a garden of Sussex, England, is said to bear upon its piate these four mottoes, each for its own season: "After Darkness, Light;" "Alast how swift;" "I warn whilst I move;" "So passes Life."

Familiar old mottoes are some of our every day proverbs. Some of these are, "All things do wax and wane;" "The longest day must end;" "Make hay while the sun shines."

One of the most appropriate of these mottoes used to be borne by a dial that stood in the old Temple Gardens, and it is said to have been furnished by the great lord chancellor Bacon. His lordship was hard at work one day in his chambers, when an idle student dropped in to ask for a motto for the new sun dial which was then being built. Twice the student humbly made his request, but the grave chancellor gave no reply or sign of having heard it. At last, as the petitioner began for the third time, Bacon looked up and said, angrily: "Sirrah, be gone about your business!"

"A thousand thanks, my lord," replied the suitor. "The very thing for

"You may name this boy, Mary," said a man to his wife, when their fifth child was a few weeks old, "only you must call him John." The father had had his own way with the other four, and it was no more than fair that he should consult his wife's taste for once. It is a pleasure to see husbands thus considerate. "Indeed?"

"Yes; my wife wants a new dress to take home."

"Ah!"

"Just show her what you have. Let her select whatever she wants."

"What line of goods will you have, madam?" asked the clerk.

"Oh, something in silk," answered the husband for her.

The clerk took down a roll of bright colored patterns.

"How does that please you, madam?" he asked.

"No, that is too bright," said the husband.
"How do you like this, madam?" sked the clerk, displaying another soll.
"No, my wife doesn't like that," are returned. "It is too dark."

Again and again the clerk displayed his wares before them, always appealing to the taste of his wife, and being unswered by the husband.

The Dog and the Baby.

She sat in the Long Island depot and fondled a dude dog, while the aurse girl carried al little human member of the family. The dude dog's hair was banged over its forehead, and all it wanted was a pair of knee breeches and a butter cracker hat to be mistaken for a lawn tennis player looking for some girls to have a game. Its tail was shaved off almost up to the terminus, where there was a miniature duster that gave it the appearance of a putty blower with a feather stuck in the end. The clerk opened the window with a bang, and the fashionably dressed lady turned to purchase her ticket, leaving the dog on the floor.

Two horny handed sons of toil entered the waiting room bearing a trunk the size of a canal boat. They evidently mistook the dude dog for a door mat, for they placed the trunk on its outer edge. A man who stood beside the lady at the ticket window remarked:

"Ee huvins. Oi do be thinkin' that The Dog and the Baby.

the lady at the ticket window remarked:

"Be huvins, Oi do be thinkin' that wan av yer family's in trouble!"

She thought he referred to the baby and took no notice of the remark. Suddenly there was a scream from the nurse girl. She let the baby fall and hurried to the rescue. The lady turned and took in the situation at a glance. Then she swooned. She kept on fainting up to the arrival of the train and them revived long enough to berate the nurse for her carelessness. When they took the dog from under the trunk the poor little fellow looked for all the world like a surrogate's seal, and his tail wasn't fat enough for a paper cutter.

The American Naval Officer.

One of the best compliments which I have heard of as paid to the officers of the "squadron of evolution" was from an Englishman, who had long been a resident of Boston. He said he was struck by the gentlemanly and modest demeanor of these wearers of uniforms, which impressed him as differing greatly from the consequential, not to say arrogant, air of officers of British men-of-war. This peculiarity, he said, extended to the sailors, who were as courteous as the officers in affording information. "Why, that squadron," he said, "will furnish a better argument for republicanism than any number of South American revolutions. It seems to me that a tribute of this sort from a foreigner is exceedingly satisfactory and it opens up considerations of the relation of manners to official life which have a wide application. The Englishmen said he had seen gray haired sailors in the British navy insulted by beardless midshipmen, and he was much impressed by the self respecting appearance of "Jack" on board the squadron of evolution, and under this head he included seamen of various nationalities, not excepting Chinese cooks, assimilated by American discipline.—

In one of the Indiana prisons is a convict who is serving a life sentence for the commission of one of the most horrible of crimes. It has been said that no man is so bad that he has not friends. The friends of this man from the beginning of his sentence have never ceased to work for his pardon, Influential citizens and public officials have been induced to write personal letters to all the governors who have held office since the term of confinement began. has been prepared and hundreds of signatures secured.

It is related that at one time a governor was almost persuaded to pardon the man. The sentiment in his favor seemed fairly overwhelming. As a last precaution he sent for his private secretary to talk over the whole case with the prisoner himself. The prisoner told his story forcibly, but so glibly as to indicate that he had carefully prepared it and committed it to memory. As his recital closed he drew a photograph of a beautiful young woman from his pocket.

"The first thing I shall do when I am released will be to marry this girl," he said.

"Who is she?" asked the visitor.

"She is Miss M——," he replied, "and she is the daughter of one of the richest and proudest families in the city of ——. She will marry me the minute I am set free.

"How do you happen to know her?"

She fell in love with me at first sight. Don't worry about me; I'm solid with her. The secretary looked at the photograph again. The face shown there was delicate and refined, and every line indicated the confiding truthfulnesss of innocent girlhood. He looked at the prisoner. In his eye was a wicked leer of triumph. Evil and sin were stamped upon every feature. When the secretary made report to the governor he told the story of the photograph. The chief executive pondered over it a while, then bringing his fist down upon his desk with a force that set all its light furniture to rattling, he said:

Young Vaccinators.

Young Vaccinators.

Two young assistant city physicians paid a visit to the Washington school the other morning which they will remember to the longest day they live. So will sixteen young misses who rank nearly or quite as young ladies. Professor Ridgeway had a hand in the affair, and, keenly appreciative of a good joke, he enjoys the telling of this one.

There is some sort of a law about the vaccination of children, and the young medicos called at the school with the request that a number of the pupils be brought out for examination as to whether their scars were of a recent enough date. Their pockets were stuffed with points ready for use, and they were eager and anxious to experiment. Professor Ridgeway, the obliging principal, told them they should have all the subjects they wanted, and, stepping into a recitation room, spoke to the pupils of the seventh grade. Then they filed into the hall—sixteen as fair young ladies as one could wish to see.

The doctors stood aghast, while the young ladies stood up in line with wondering interest.

Professor Ridgeway introduced the young specialists, and tersely explained the object of their visit. The young ladies blushed and hesitated. The young men blushed and looked for a means of escape. One bright young miss with a convenient pair of seissors quietly cut a slit in the left sleeve of her dress, and this brought the young ladies to the giggling stage, which threatened to become hysterical as a companion whispered:

"Don't start that fashion! Mine isn't on my arm."

Then the young medicos fled wildly, the girls went juto convulsions and

Then the young medicos fled wildly, the girls went into convulsions, and Professor Ridgeway erased every black mark against everybody for the day.

The Earth Growing.

The earth, traveling in its orbit around the sun and onward with the entire solar system around some unknown and still greater center of at traction, says The American Geologist, is constantly traversing new regions of space, which it depletes of meteoric dust and meteorites, thus steadily—no matter how slowly—increasing in diameter. Now let this growth continue till the earth has just twice the attractive power which it now possesses; we would then have twice the number of meteorics and double the quantity of dust falling annually upon it than now.

Fortunately for our heads the earth has not as yet attained very formidable dimensions, but we may look upon it as an established fact that it constantly gains in weight, and that in proportion to such gain its attractive power steadily increases.

The attractive force of the sun is senomous that a perpetual hail of meteorite and a torrent of dust particles must rush upon it from all directions, and some of the foremost observers are now of the opinion that these falling bodies are the sole cause of the sun's hast.

In the light of this theory our earth is a young and growing, not an old and dying planet, a planet with a future, which ought to be cheerful news to all of us, although we shall not live to reap the benefit of it; and the sun, far from being on its last legs as an expiring luminary, is steadily gaining in heat and lighting capacity.

Look at Your Nose.

A somewhat singular fact has been observed with reference to the shape of the nose, or rather, the setting of it in the face, so to speak. To be strictly correct, from the artist's point of view, the nose should be exactly in the middle of the face, and at right angles with a line from the pupil of one eye to that of the other. As a matter of fact, it is rarely or never found thus placed; it is almost invariably a little out of "the square," and the fact of it being so is often that which lends a peculiar expression and piquancy to the face.

A medical writer points out that there are anatomical reasons why a slight deviation from the true central line may be expected, and that the nose which is found to be "centrally located" and accurately straight between the two eyes may, after all, be considered an abnormal one, the only absolutely true and correct organ being, in fact, that which deviates a little either to the right or left.—St. Louis Republic.

Country Life.

The enjoyment of country life, says Vick's Magazine, consists in being en rapport with nature; enjoying the sunshine and the shade, the birds, and insects, and animals, and trees, and every living thing; the very rocks and the hills. There are instances of families of cultured and intellectual persons who hasten away from town in early springtime, and repair to their country homes, where they remain until snow flies in late autumn. Raising plants and flowers, taking an interest in the fruit trees and vines, the care of bees and chickens, a sharp eye out for wild flowers through the season; these employments are sufficient, and books and papers and magazines of the latest issues contribute to the variety. Rowing and riding still favor activity. The social visits of companions and acquaintances are not wanting. It is a life of freedom and intellectual action and enjoyment that town life does not afford. But there are other and many happy country homes where the families remain under the roof tree through all the chaldren are acquainted with the squirrels and the birds, and bring them at their call; they grow up in sunshine and pure air, and with the freshest and best aliment develops strong, healthy bodies and active minds. "And the Holy Spirit was upon him." Here is the secret of power to please God;
"By My Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts;" "Yo shall receive power after the Holy Spirit is come upon you;" "Tarry in Jerusalem until ye be endued with power from on high" (Zec. iv, 6; Acts i, 8; Luke xxiv, 49). Let us carnestly seek to be "filled with the Spirit" again and again, and anew for every service, 26. "And it had been revealed unto him by the Holy Spirit;" "The things of God none knoweth save the Spirit of God;" "The Spirit of Truth will guide you into all truth" (I Cor. ii, 11; John xvi, 13). It is impossible for the natural man to understand spiritual things; but being born of God, born from above, and having become partakers of the Divine nature, we have One in us who is perfect in knowledge, who Himself wrote all Scripture, and if we will only be still and hearken diligently, the will guide us into all truth.

HE AND I. Down in the yellow bay,
A boy and girl at play,
A hand I;
Across the sea spring sunbeams glancing,
White waves in airy state advancing,
Joy in our light hearts dancing,
While hours slip by, Down in the yellow bay,
A youth and maiden gay,
He and 1;
Upon the sea the summer sleeping,
Up to the shore the soft waves creeping,
Time to our young love keeping,
While hours flash by,

Down in the yellow bay,
We took our cheerless way,
He and I;
The shivering autumn wept and wondered,
so on the shore the wild waves thundered;
We knew that we were sundered,
While hours rushed by.

Down in the yellow bay,
There wandered yesterday,
Not he, but I;
Chill winter on the cold sea lying,
Upon the shore the long waves sighing,
An old gray woman crying,
While hours wore by,

Something Investigators Do Not Find.
The more the investigators dig into the past the less and less original and important we become. A man has just found in Egypt proofs of trademarks and signatures on the bottles, and brands and things which were in use 1600 years before the Christian era, including alphabetical writing, which was supposed to be quite a modern invention. He has even found a baseball among the ruins, and quite possibly vention. He has even found a baseball among the ruins, and quite possibly the next thing will be a record of the champions and the rules of the game, which will probably prove that modern sport to be quite in its infancy yet with us.

other point. We were back in the dark, where they could not see us, while they were at the mouth of the ravine and every man of them showed against the starlight sky. We knew what they were after, and prepared ourselves accordingly. There were twenty-eight of us, and we crept up inch by inch until, when we finally heard the rattle of the stage coach, we were not over twenty-live feet from the bunch of marauders. We could hear and see them making ready, and just as they were about to dash out on the trail we gave them a volley.

Talk about an Indian not feeling surprised! Why, they yelled out like so many old women scared by a cow, and two or three of them shouted to the Great Spirit to save them as they ran. We killed nine and wounded four with that one volley, and only one of the wounded lived beyond two days. The survivor was a middle aged warrior, bearing the scars of many battles. I was asked to question him, and as he saw my purpose he shut himself up like a clam. I started off with.

At that the group around him burst out laughing, and the warrior looked up with rueful expression and said:

white corn, her stockings of red corn with yellow corn stripes. Her flesh tints are well represented by a pinkish corn with the grain set up on edge instead of laid flat, the brads being driven through edgewise so as to hold them up in that position very close together, the result being a smoother effect. The bow upon which Minnehaha leans is made of kernels set up on edge also, and the same device is used for most of the more elaborate features of the design, making a contrast that greatly assists the chiarescuro. The ground is made to shade off from foreground to background by an artful arrangement of variegated corns in different tints. It is a superb exhibit altogether of Missouri's wealth in corns, though it is probable that no Indian young lady in real life everbad so many.

The Methods Employed and Uses of Photographing the Stars.

A mariner, who drawing near port at night, is guided by the two entrance lights to the harbor. As he approaches he sees these two lights separate, while when he leaves the harbor at night the further he gets away the closer do the lights appear to draw together. In a similar manner the astronomer observes the lights of the universe to learn whither the great so lar system is tending. His beacons are the stars, and in that region toward which the sun is approaching the stars seem to spread away from each other, while in that opposite region from which the sun is retreating the stars seem to draw in more closely together. Indeed, it is only by observing these changes in the apparent places of the stars that we learn the fact of the sun's motion. To investigate the subject properly we must employ a large number of stars, and we must wait a very long time in order to measure their displacements with recision. This is ber of stars, and we must wait a very long time in order to measure their displacements with precision. This is exactly the kind of work in which the photographs may be expected to help us. Every plate will be carefully treasured up, to be compared with the plates taken in subsequent years, and from the changes in the apparent places of the stars we shall learn with places of the stars we shall learn with nore accuracy than we have hitheric oeen able to acquire the true facts with egard to that mighty voyage through pace on which our sun and all his ystem is journeying. But there are many other aids which hotography renders to us in our ef-orts to learn more of the skies. One of the most difficult problems is that if determining the distance of stars. his depends upon very careful meas-rements made between a star and ther stars in its neighborhood. It This depends upon very careful measurements made between a star and other stars in its neighborhood. It often takes an hour to measure the apparent distance between two stars in the ordinary way, but in that hour the telescope might much more profitably be employed in taking a photograph on which 100 stars, or perhaps more, would be found, and the distance between every pair of which would admit of being determined with accuracy.

mit of being determined with accuracy.

Still, other and more marvelous applications of photography to the heavens have been made. The greatest telescopes are often directed to the observation of the nebulæ, or stains and patches of light situated at incredible depths in space. There are thousands of these objects known to those astronomers who assiduously cultivate this branch of their science, and the nebutæ are all so faint that, with a single exception, they are invisible to the unaided eye. The exception is the Great Nebulæ, in Andromeda, which appears like adult spot of light, just visible as a glimmer on the darkest night. For ages this object has attracted the attention of astronomers, and numerous drawings have been made of it. But the nature of the Great Nebulæ was never understood until Mr. Isaac Roberts obtained a marvous photographic picture of the nebulæ, after an exposure of four hours. It was then seen to be composed of a number of rings of gaseous material, apparently in a highly heated state, and doubtless going through some great process of transformation.

Hardly less wonderful is the photographic picture of the Pleiades. This well known group of little stars exhibits no nebulosity in the telescope, but after a long exposure a nebulæ is depicted on the plate. Here photography has been the means of telling us of the existence of a mighty nebulæ surrounding the Pleiades, but which was quite unknown till the photograph showed it. Even now it has never been actually seen in the telescope.

An Invitation to Dance.

An Invitation to Dance.

If you chance to be a visitor at a Mexican "baile," quietly sitting on a bench minding your business and watching the show, do not be surprised if some bewitching senorita, with raven hair and reguish eyes, trips lightly up to where you are sitting and unceremoniously smashes an egg over your head. Don't be alarmed or frightened, but take it all in good part. The egg is not addled, nor has it contents of any kind save some sort of sweet smelling perfume, sachet powder, or perhaps bits of fine gilt paper, all of which drop about your head and shoulders in a perfect shower.

This curious action is merely to show her preference for you, and means an invitation for you to get up and dance with her. The ceremony described is to Mexican "bailes" as our German fayors are to our ball rooms. This little diversion is carried to a harmless extravagance at times, especially at private "baile" parties, when the eggs, possessing shells fresceed and decorated in the most delicate extremes of art, oftentimes contain valuable contents, and even perhaps gold dust. If the noble who gives the ball is a man of wealth and consequence, then the favors are likely to be so costly as to reach the verge of extravagant nonsense.—Mexicau Letter in Cleveland Leader.

THE VALUE OF MINUTES.

Different Ylews Regarding the Interesting

There are many different and more or less conflicting views as to what constitutes a waste of time. Severe people consider every moment wasted that is not devoted to productive work or necessary sleep or rest. They would make of man a mere machine, to be fed to maintain his energies, to be allowed to sleep a limited number of hours to prevent wearing out, but would have him devote all his other hours to work of some kind.

Other people, a little broader in their views, recognize the need of intellectual culture and would permit a certain amount of time to be given to reading and study without counting it a waste. The liberals recognize another need of humanity, and allow some hours for recreation and amusement. But there may be waste of time under any of these limitations, and they may be to some extent violated without waste. Time is wasted that does not produce benefit of some kind to the individual, but the kinds of benefit to which he is susceptible are so many and the needs of different men so various that there is an almost infinite variety of ways in which time may be usefully employed. The test as to whether time is being wasted must, therefore, be applied in individual cases, and the only question is whether it is being beneficially employed.

That time devoted to recreation or amusement is not wasted is expressed in the old proverb: "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." A cheerful disposition is such an important factor in energetic work that to deprive a man of the enjoyments of life is to curtail his working power. If, however, a due proportion is not maintained between work and play there is a waste of time in the opposite direction. Too much amusement promotes a distaste for work.

The hours devoted to reading and study are beneficially employed, not wasted, when the line of study is such as to promote the welfare of the individual, but time may be wasted in reading that which is for no benefit or that which distracts one's thoughts from necessary occupations. Time may even be wasted in pr ordered household or shop every tool has its place and work proceeds systematically. One thing is no sooner done than another is ready at hand, and the tools are always in order and ready to be taken up. On the other hand, in a disorderly household or shop, working without method, there are frequent interruptions or delays while the question is being considered what to do next, or while search is being made for tools that when found have to be put in order before the main work can be begun. A few minutes out of an hour may be wasted in such delays, but in the aggregate they out of an hour may be wasted in such delays, but in the aggregate they amount to a total that shows this to be one of the most common and almost unnoted sources of the waste of time.

In large establishments employing thousands of men the employer has to look after the possible waste of time, by as many individuals as he employs, and his prosperity or failure may turn upon this simple question of a waste of time. In such a case the loss by the individual is so greatly multiplied that in a single day it may amount to enough to offset the profits of a close business. This is the reason for the attention given in manufacturing establishments to methods of doing work and for the strict rules governing the admission and departure of workingmen.

To the individual itsometimes seems workingmen.

To the individual it sometimes seems unnecessary to close the doors at 7 o'clock and compel a man who is one minute late to lose a quarter of a day, but a little calculation shows the necessity for such a rule. It is not only the individual who would lose time if such rules did not exist. The whole establishment would be demoralized if they were not established and enforced, thousands of dollars' worth of machinery would lie idle, along with the workmen, and it would be impossible to keep the work moving from department to department so as to avoid further waste of time.

In a workshop employing 3,000 men five minutes' wasted time by each man in a day would mean the loss of the labor of twenty-five men for a day of ten hours, besides the incidental losses due to idle machinery and the difficulty of keeping the whole establishment constantly employed if there should be uncertainty as to the output from any department. The extreme case of a large establishment only serves to point out what takes place on a smaller scale in smaller factories and workshops where there is lack of method or disregard of rules as to the hours of labor. orkingmen. To the individual it sometimes seems er factories and workshops where there is lack of method or disregard of rules as to the hours of labor.

The particular ways in which time should be employed (always assuming they are not positively harmful) are really of less importance than that there should be method in the use of time and avoidance of the smaller items of waste that result from carelessness in preparation, thoughtlessness and a neglect of system.—Baltimore Sun.

Some Foolish People
Allow a cough to run until it gets beyond the reach of medicine. They often say,
"Oh it will wear away," but in most cases it wears them away. Could they be induced to try the successful medicine called Kemp's Balsam, which is sold on a positive guarantee to cure, they would immediately see the excellent effect after taking the first dose.
Price 50c. and $1 00. Trial size free. At all druggists.

The bottles mentioned in the Bible were made of the skins of animals, and such vessels are still used for carrying water in Asia and Africa.

A century of progress has not produced a temedy equal to Ely's Cream Baim for catarrh, cold in the head and hay fever. It is not a liquid or a snuff, but is perfectly safe and easily applied into the nostriis. It gives immediate relief and cures the worst cases.

Don't say there is no help for catarrh, hay fever and cold in the head, since thousands testify that Ely's Cream Balm has tentify cured them. It supersedes the dangerous use of Higuids and snuffs. It is deasily applied into the nostriis and gives relief at once. Price 50 cents.

Horsessniff the air and get wild when they see them. The augers tear up the hillsides, smash houses like a cyclone and suck up men like a water spout. Then when they have spent their force, quit sashaying and have lost their cohesive powers, they go all to pieces in as strange a way as they were formed, and there is nothing but a pile of sand, sagebrush, stone, loose boards and what not, to tell what they once were. Dancing Giants of the Desert.

Curious atmospheric conditions of the desert and high plateaus at certain seasons of the year produce strange phenomena but little understood except by persons who have long lived in those regions. The dry weather in Nevada has produced a host of giant dancers there. Formerly they appeared only in the spring, the Peranegat and Humboldt valleys being their rendezvous. Now they are down in Lyon county, far to the southwest. "These dancing giants, or waltzing sand augers," said Judge Kelly of Pioche yesterday, "are puzzlers to all scientists. How they brace up and hold together so long is what gets them. On a quiet, sunny day you see a little handful of sage brush soar aloft on a light breeze. Some more joins it, until it is as big as your hat and then your body, and then the sand and rocks and soil by the bushel begin to roll into the mass from the ground, ascending upward like a column. It is soon as big as a telegraph pole, and all the time gaining, and ere long its top maybe reaches 1,000, maybe 5,000 feet. While you are watching this one probably three or four others will spring up, or a half dozen will come waltzing down from the upper end of the valley, having traveled probably twenty-five miles and torn up the soil like a steam plow in their waltzing and zig-zagging.

"These are some of the things I saw last week ten miles below Pioche. Horses sniff the air and get wild when they see them. The augers tear up the hillsides, smash houses like a cythan and the produce and such um men like a water and see them. To the heirs-at-law, next of kin, and all other p sons interested in the estate of George F. Smi late of Woburn, in said County, deceased, Gol. Long's Ancedote of Dom Pedro.

He told me a short but interesting story apropos of Dom Pedro's enforced retirement from the imperial throne of Brazil. "Dom Pedro," he said, "is a thorough democrat, and I have many reasons for believing that if he did not actively comive at his own retirement, he was at least aware that it was about to be forced upon him, and took no steps to prevent it. He was so much of a democrat, in fact, that I can boast of the fact that even when he was emperor of Brazil he owed me fifty cents. The manner in which this enormous debt was incurred is amusing. When the Brazilan emperor visited Egypt, the khedive, in whose service I was then engaged, appointed me Dom Pedro's chief of staff. It was part of my duty to see that the royal chariot, drawn by four magnificent horses, should be every morning at the doorway of the emperor's hotel. Dom Pedro had a deep rooted dislike to this display and evaded the chariot whenever possible. One morning I arrived in front of his apartments in time to see the emperor jump into the most disreputable looking lack in Alexandria. I followed him on horseback to his destination, but he was so desirous of being able to roam about without the companionship of royal officials that he sprang from the queer looking conveyance and hastened away without paying 'the driver his fare. The jehu, unaware of the emperor's identity, was with loud cries, running after him when I intercepted him and paid the fifty cents which was owing. The incident is interesting simply as showing what a profound contempt Dom Pedro has for ceremonial form."—Philadelphia Inquirer.

What a Manufacturer Thinks of the List.

The following opinion by James Skinner, Esq., one of the largest leather makers in this city, is so fair and candid and withal so sensible that we give it a place in the columns of the JOURNAL with pleasure:

"Comparisons had not been made with the list that went into effect when the strikers resumed work, but compared with the price list offered by the manufacturers, there was a raise of a bout 5 per cent. The manufacturers' price list the proposed an increase of 4 per cent, but the strikers demanded 7 or 8 per cent, so that the State board's list was to all the State board list and the last was to all the State board list was to all the State board list was to all the State board price and the same number of sides done per day as another manufacturer on light weights from which the bellies and shanks work was not taken into encreasing the state a day's work me that later a day's work as not the manufacturer had an advantage over the latter according to the rulings of the K. of L. committee, while the workmen in one factory did far more work per day than those in the other.

"In making out the State board price list the question of what should constitute a day's work was not taken into concession made a accordance with the point was left entirely in the manufacturers' hands."

Last Friday evening a very pleasant young people's sociable was held in the church vestry. Prizes were given to the gentlemen who executies the best plain sewing and to the ladder to drive a list the straightest. These contests excited much merriment. The book per sew every comical. The friends present contributed for the purchase of new singing books.

The National Flower.

Qur readers will be interested to know that, so far as the suffrages obtained in the Prang campaign can make it so, the Golden-rod is the national flower. Seventy per cent of all votes pronounce for the Golden-rod; the arbutus receiving 18 per cent, and the remaining 14 per cent being divided between the daisy, mountain laurel, dandelion, sunflower, apple blassen, and others.—Zion's Herald.

A Plea for Girls.

Parents put saw and hammer, gimlet and serew-driver, in their soms hands at a tender age. They look upon tools as a boy's birchright. But a fittle girl is told in a borrified tone to 'sput them down," to 'mot touch;" that she will can be seed that 'generally. But the time is not far off when there will be a room in the house set apart for the work-bench, and that bench and its tools will be as a free to the daughters as to the sons. In their fashionable brass hammering and wood-carving the girls have 'syot a taste' of it. We may expect to see the carpenter come to give lessons as regularly as the music-teacher. Why not? Eight children out of ten would like it better. A dozen years hence extain trades will be largely occupied by women. We shall see the student at the Harvard Annex emerge from belong companionship with the 'bigher mathematics' with the 'plans and elevations' of a house in one hand and a 'bill of lumber' in the other—with the 'bighter mathematics' with the 'chains and a 'bill of lumber' in the other—with the 'bighter mathematics' with the 'chains and a 'bill of lumber' in the other—with the 'bighter mathematics' with the 'spins and a 'bill of lumber' in the other—with the 'bighter mathematics' with the 'spins and a 'bill of lumber' in the other—with the 'bighter mathematics' with the 'spins and a 'bill of lumber' in the other—with the 'bighter mathematics' with the 'spins and a 'bill of lumber' in the other—with the 'bighter mathematics' with the 'spins and elevations' to a house in one hand and a 'bill of lumber' in the other—with the 'bighter mathematics' with the 'spins and elevations' of a house in one hand and a 'bill of lumber' in the other—with the 'bighter mathematics' with the 'spins and elevations' of a house in one hand and a 'bill of lumber' in the other—with the 'bighter mathematics' with the 'spins and a 'bill of lumber' in the 'bill of lumbe Parents put saw and hammer, gimlet

IT IS BETTER TO LIVE

I have sometimes felt that the burden Of life was too beary to bear; And have longed to lie down at the not And rest and forget all my care; But over my heart comet a message, Repeated again and again— "It is better to live and to suffer, Than to die to be rid of the pain."

There is rest in the darkness of dying, And an end to the weary despair. The grave holds sure peace and calm silen No sorrow nor pain can be there; But perhaps, in the struggle of living, In a soul that has need of my cure— Some heart may be bearing a burden That my hand may lighten or share.

Twould be easy to say "I am weary,"
And lie down and give up the strife,
To suffer no more with the heartache
And sorrow I meet in this life;
But perhaps from my sorrow swept heartstrings
A melody sweet may be wrung,
And my lips, when they drank deep of sufferling.

ing.
The tenderest songs may have sung.

Tis so hard to be patient with living. When all of the world is awry; When all of the world is awry; So wearisone waiting for pleasures That will only come after we die; But even through all my complaining I can hear that undying refrain—"It is better to live and to suffer, Than to die to be out of the pain."

I will live and be strong, and will suffer If need be, until I find rest,

If need be, until if not rest,
When life and its trials are over;
Though never my life should be blest,
Though always the sun should be darkened
By the clouds that hang over my way,
I will trust that the light will be clearer
When at last I awake "in the day."

Repose of Manner.

Charles Corson is a merry, rollicking young man, who often tries his good mother by his great carelessness of behavior. She had often said to him that she wished he would sit more quietly, talk in a less noisy fashion, and try in every way to cultivate repose of manner.

One evening there was to be a roomful of formal company at the Corsons, and Mrs. Corson gave her son line upon line, and precept upon precept.

ful of formal company at the Corsons, and Mrs. Corson gave her son line upon line, and precept upon precept. "There is nothing more elegant in a young man," she concluded, "than perfect repose of manner."

The company came. Charles grew interested in the conversation, and quite forgot his good resolutions. He rushed about the rooms, talked very fast, and at last, in fetching a dish of ice cream for one of the guests, stumbled against his mother's chair and spilled half of the ice cream down the folds of her gown.

Then came, with a flash of sweet tempered emphasis, words which contrasted drolly with the abashed face of the young man.

"Charles, dear," said Mrs. Corson, scarcely turning from the friend with whom she chanced to be talking, "Charles, dear, I wish you would cultivate repose of manner!"

The delicate contrast between the phase of reproof and the vexatious action that evoked it made every one smile; and Charles smiled, too, as, begging his mother's pardon, he knelt down, napkin in hand, to wipe the runned folds of silk.—Youth's Companion.

How Jay Gould Dispenses Charity.

Like most of the successful men of the present age, Mr. Gould is extremely methodical and systematic in his habits. He rises every morning at precisely half past 7, seldom varying from that hour more than ten minutes. At 8 o'clock he sits down to his breakfast, which in his case is usually French rolls and a cup of coffee, and expects to find every member of his family present at that men! Breakfast over, his private secretary is called in, and the numerous begging letters of the morning's mail are laid upon the table. Each member selects at random a number of these letters and reads them over. If any one of them are impressed by any of the letters they are laid aside for future reference, while the others go into the waste basket. Those letters which have been laid aside are then taken up and discussed, and if a majority of those present conclude that it is a case which really deserves assistance the assistance is sure to come within a very substantial form and without the slightest hint as to the identity of the donor.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

There are two ladies on the committee appointed by the British Medical Association to investigate the state of brain development and power among school children—Mrs. Bryant, D.Se. of the North London Collegiate School for Girls, and Miss Cooper, of the High School, Edgbaston.

Mrs. Bentley, the wife of one of the best-known African missionaries, is teaching telegraphy to some black bors on the Congo. The last time she was in Europe she learned telegraphy for the purpose of training andrew operators. She hopes to have them ready for service by the time the Congo railroad is laid.

The sphere of woman continues to enlarge. The lastest evidence comes from Connecticut, where a young woman has just been given a licease as a dispensing druggist. It descretes to be added that she not only got her license, but passed the best examination that has yet been inab before the examination that has yet been inab before the examination that has yet been in and before the examination that has yet been in and before the examination board.—Hoston Heradd.

Miss Maria Louise Baldwin, a young colored lady, has been appointed by the firm the control of the control of the late P. L. Baldwin, who was for many years connected with the Boston postoflice. grape, apple, parched corn, or what is known as "pop corn," corn, birch buds, bread, etc. Solitary, silent starvation seems to have annihilated the wild, unconquerable instinct.

The secret to a door seems here to have been opened to its possible domestication. Its kind hearted possessor is already inquiring round among the boys for a partner and wife for his solitary pet. Some starving, imprisoned bird may yet be found by the farmer boys beneath the snow crust after some winter storm, and allow us to carry out this curious experiment to domesticate a hitherto deemed incorrigibly untamable bird. He Carried en Eleven Pound Dirk and Whipped Bears Single Handed.

Asberry Wills has been dead a dozen years, but his phenomenal strength, coupled with his daring exploits in the Sierras, are fresh in the minds of pioneers. Asberry was born in Mariposa county, and at the age of 17 years stood 6 feet and 4 inches high in his stocking feet, and was at once entitled to and received the sobriquet of Butterfly Whale. The Whale was unusually fond of explorations among the rugged, snow clad peaks of the jungled mountains. He was a man of fine physique, proportionately built, with an eagle eye and a clear cut, American profile. His hair and beard were as black as the raven's beak, and he always wore a luxuriant growth of both. His beard at 23 reached his well filled hunting belt; and I have often seen him, says the correspondent, tie on his somberor with his mustache. He had a sparkle of humor about him, and his commanding person, bold, daring and aggressive make up, made him a general favorite in camp.

He, like other phenomenal men, had his peculiarities. "Old Hell-in-the-Brush" and "Heart Deep" were ever his companions in camp and on the trail. "Old Hell-in-the-Brush" was a magnificent London twist, rifle bore gun, which exactly chambered an ounce ball. It was an old fashioned muzzle loader, weighed eighteen pounds, but it never went back on its credentials, as indicated by its name, when in the hands of the Whale. "Heart Deep" was a tremendous steel two edged dirk, weighing eleven pounds, which he had thus grimiy christened were his constant commen. rigibly untamable bird.

The Hurry in New York.

When you are in New York, hurry as the New Yorkers do, is a very good rule for visitors to the metropolis to observe. Just as soon as you begin to act in the streets as if you had plenty of time to transact business in, the police begin to look on you with suspicion, people bump against you, tread on your heels and swear at you, and an entire stranger is apt to grasp you by the hand, call you by name, assure you that he is an old friend of your favorite relative and ask you to cash a check for him. Many New Yorkers hurry along the streets for this reason alone, because everybody else is hurrying, and to walk slowly is to get in everybody's way. Many others hurry from force of habit, believing themselves to be in terrible haste when really they are not in anything like the hurry they think they are.

The writer found himself following such a man the other day. He dashed up the stairs of the elevated railway two steps at a time, and then fretted five minutes for a train; jumped for it as soon as the guard opened the gates and had to be thrust back to let the passengers off first; stood by the door ready to jump off for full two minutes before the train stopped; sprang off and thundered down the stairs, jostling and pushing those who were coming up, as if he only had two seconds to catch a ferryboat and did not expect another until the spring, and soon disappeared far anead in the crowd. When the writer overtook him again he was planted squarely in the way of a dozen other people who were really in a hurry, and was calmly reading a newspaper bulletin board from top to bottom.—New York Tribune.

pounds, which the Whate could use as easily as a penknife. These two weap-ons, which he had thus grimly christened, were his constant compan-ions while traversing the mountain ranges from Mineral King to Mt. Ly-ell

Many and thrilling were the daring encounters which could be related of him during his twelve years of mountain life in Fresno county.

The Whale's lifting weight was nine times his own, or 1,800 pounds. At another time he displayed even greater strength and wonderful presence of mind. He and Frank Lewis were on the middle fork of King's river prospecting for gold and silver.

One evening about dusk when neareub fully six months old and weighing upwards of 200 pounds. The cub what Lemon Julee Will Do.

A good deal has been said lately through the papers about the healthfulness of lemons. The latest advice how to use them so they will do the most good runs as follows: Most people know the benefit of lemonade before breakfast, but few know how it is more than doubled by taking another at night also. The way to get the better of a bilious system without blue pills or quinine is to take the juice of one, two or three lemons, as the appetite craves, in as much lee water as it is pleasant to drink, without sugar, before going to bed. In the morning on rising, or at least half an hour before breakfast, take the juice of one lemon in a goblet of water. That will clear the system of humors and bile, with mild efficacy, without any of the weakening effects of calomel or Congress water. People should not irritate the stomach by eating the lemons clear; the powerful acid juice, which is almost corrosive, infallibly produces inflammation after a while; but properly diluted, so that it does not burn or draw the throat, it does its full medicinal work without ham, and when the stomach is clear of food has abundant opportunity to work on the system thoroughly.—Christian Union. phine and burn a little saltpeter behind it," remarked Frank, "to make him sleep sounder."

But the Whale wouldn't listen to it. Frank got on the pinnacle of a neighboring tree, so, as he said, he could see just how Wills caught hold of the cub. Wills grabbed the animal by both hind feet, and startled thus from its lair, the Whale was soon convinced that he had a large and powerful brute to contend with. The cub set up a hideous yelling, and showing fight, summoned its young strength perhaps for the first time to cope with its new found fee. The bowlder was slanting and slick, making footing unsure, and down its declivitous side rolled man and bear. A thick copse of yerba buena and fern received the mysterious couple into its wild retreat. When a footing was reached Wills was on top, but the desperate animal by its crues had warned the ferocious mother of its peril. Frank, from his perch, attempted to pour hot lead into the approaching beast, now not more than lifty yards away and nearing the spot twenty feet at a bound.

The Whale took in the situation. It took both hands to overpower the cub; what was he to do? There was no time to theorize. Swinging the cub as a boy would a cat, he struck the mother full in the mouth with the cub's head. The bear fell stunned to the earth and the cub slipped from the Whale's grasp, bleeding and helpless. Quicker than you could even think the circumstance in rehearsal, trusty "Heart Deep" had done its work. The remarked Frank, "to make him

Red Underwear.

The popular belief in the sanitary efficacy of red underwear is a clinging superstition, nothing more. Red was in ancient times considered a potent charm against the evil eye. At one time in the Sixteenth century, when the evil eye was esteemed to be especially triumphant in England, there was a boom in red tape which it has never since experienced. Many people to this day believe that a red string worn about the neck is a sure preventive of asthma, measles and mumps. The relies of this old faith are today best preserved in the great confidence which obtains in the medical virtues of red flannel, and a not so widespread belief that the milk of a red cow is better than that of any other cow. As to red flannel in the single merit over other colors that the dyeing material used destroys all vestige of animal life in the wool, and that red flannel does.—Physician in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Whale's grasp, bleeding and helpless. Quicker than you could even think the circumstance in rehearsal, trusty "Heart Deep" had done its work. The cub and mother had met the enemy and they were his'n.

Frank cautiously descended from the upper tier of the wild amphitheatre, and spent the remainder of the night trying to find the place in the animal's anatomy that the leaden messenger from the rille had penetrated on its mission of death; but he found only a wide, deep gash, through which eleven pounds of steel, obeying the influence of a giant's muscle, had served notice of ejectment upon the chain of life.

The Whale met with but one enemy to whom he succumbed. In the spring of 72 mountain fever seized his powerful frame, his mind departed, and soon the reaper wrapped his thick, mysterious mantle of eternity about him and the Whale was no more. On the left bank of the great King's river canyon, beneath a few feet of grantite soil and the refreshing shade of a wide spreading juniper, wrapped in his hunting garb, unwept, uncoffined and unsung, lies the hero of Mariposa, and above his grave this simple inscription:

Epigram, primarily, is a Greek word, and signifies an inscription. In literature, it is usually understood to challenged and fought one duel, which for private reasons he determined should be his last. Being challenged again, he refused to meet his opponent on the plea that he had a wife and daughter who were entirely dependent upon him for support. His decision suggested this capital epigram:

Some men, with a horror of slaughter, Impose on the Scripture et minand, And honor their livies and their daughters, That their days may be long in the land. In one of Tom Hood's poems, the ghost of Sally Sumpkin's lover, who was bit in two by a shark, informs us that:

Sharks do things by halves, Yet most completely do
A bite in one place seems
But I've been bit in two. An old gentleman of the name of Page, finding a young lady's glove at a watering place, presented it to her with the following words:

If from your glove you take the letter G, Your glove leaves love, which I devote to thee. To which the young lady returned the following answer: If from your page you take the letter P, Your page is age, and that won't do for me.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in con-sumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so-much good that I wonder at myself-sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it. Mrss. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

"All right, sit down," said Fontain. The man weighed about 185 pounds, and when he seated himself Fontain pulled up his sleeve and, grasping the round of the chair firmly, he steadied himself, and with outstretched arm lifted the chair and man several feet from the floor. Then lowering the burden, he set the chair back on the floor, pocketed the $50 and walked off.

Human Nature.

We rarely seek what is within our reach. Persons living under the shadow of Bunker Hill never dream of ascending its monument. I have met distinguished Londoners who have never visited Westminster Abbey; Americans cross a mighty ocean to stand within its historic walls. It is the unattainable that appeals to the average man and woman. Said a witty woman once: "If drinking water were immoral how delightful it would taste!" A few of us have learned through physical suffering that hot water is a stimulant and is delightful, in spite of the depressing fact that its morality still remains unchallenged.

To Impress the Masculine Mind.

The following is a won an's opinion:
Men are queer creatures, to be sure.
Passementeries at $15 a yard will make no more impression on the masculine retina than mohair braid, but show an inch of ten cent torchon lace on a white petticoat; mystify his senses by blowing lotus powder into your har, wear an apron of striped bombazine, with a pocket and a cherry bow on it, get a pretty book on parade, and, above all, the impression of just having come from the bath, and you have a set of shackels to which the wrought iron handcuffs are but paper twine by comparison. -- Louisville Courier-Journal.

Before Sir Rowland Hill introduced the penny post, envelopes were little used, as a double charge was made for a paper inclosed in another, however thin each might be; even the smallest clipping from a newspaper necessitated an extra fee. The use of envelopes became common after May 6, 1840, when stamped and adhesive envelopes were introduced. The first envelope making machine was invented by Edwin Hill, brother of Rowland Hill; and De La Rue's machine for folding envelopes was patented March 17, 1845. The invention of envelopes has been attributed to S. K. Beewer, a bookseller and stationer of Brighton, about 1830. He had some small sheets of paper on which it was difficult to write the address; he invented for these a small envelope, and had metal plates made for cutting them to the required shape and size.—New York Telegram.

Ringing Noises

A Hacking Cough,

A friend asks me to multiply $5 by $5. I do so and announce the result as $25. Now multiply $00 cents, give the answer in cents, pure and simple, not as fractional parts of a dollar. I do so and am surprised to see the figures climb up to 250,000 cents, which is $2,500. As $5 and 500 cents are equivalent, the result is puzzling. It cannot be used. A cent, as such, is as distinct a unit as a dollar, and as the result is to be announced in cents the decimal cannot be pleaded in extenuation of the rather surprising result. But there is clearly something wrong. What is it?

For the cure of the inflammation and congestion called "a cold in the head" there is more patency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything clee it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant saccess as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the head, catarrh and hay fever cleed in the head, catarrh and hay fever cleed in the head, catarrh and hay fever clearly something when the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh, after all other modes of treatment have failed.

Hinging Noises
In the ears, sometimes a roaring bazzing sound are caused by catarrh, that exceedingly disagreeable and very common disease. Loss of smell or hearing also result from catarrh. Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, is a peculiarly successful remedy for this disease, which it cures by purifying the blood. If you suffer from catarrh, try Hood's Sarsaparilla, the peculiar medicine.

All estimates agree in placeing th probable total population of the United States which this year's census will show at 65,000,000. That would be 15,000,000 more than the total of 1880, and would represent a growth of thirty per cent., or the same as that of the decennial period from 1870 to 1880.

This was a happy ending to what came very near being a most disastrous break in the leather making business in this city, for had the few men at Beggs & Cobb's refused to work longer 17 or 18 factories and 1500 men would have been involved and the business of the city would have suffered greatly.

It would have been a long and bitter struggle between the manufacturers and laborers.

Happily better counsels prevailed and all troubles have been averted.

The 7.15 horse car down from here met with quite an accident Saturday evening while on the down grade in front of Charles Dearborn's house. One of the reins broke which caused one of the horses to fall, and the car and household departments offer the most varied attractions. The Mother's loped as quick as possible when it was found the horse was badly but not seriously hurt. The car kept on a few rods below to the first turnout, and the horse was sent back to the stable on the up car.

The Tale of a Press.

What an advance has been made in in the art of printing during the last quarter of a century. It seems but a few years since the luge four and six cylinder Hoe presses, with their experfeders, were deemed the finest and speediest printing machines that could be produced. The white paper was furnished in sheets, and fed to the presses by hand. Then came the perfecting presses, printing directly from a roll of the forse was and to bus done of the March number of Peterson, and we can fully endorse the verdict. A proposition to aid young authors in France by having an annual State competition for the best vorks, to be submitted to a jury, and to have these best works published at the expense of best works published at the expense of the State, is exciting much criticism in France. About one half of the popular authors are in favor of it, and a great many express themselves decidedly against it. The young authors them-selves do not appear to care for such State intervention.

HOW WEAVERS LIVE.

A Description of the Boarding Houses Patronized by Mill Operatives.

Life in a corporation boarding house has but few attractions to the more intelligent factory operatives. When he enters the portals of that place he finds that his personal and individual liberty is considerably abridged. One of the first things that attracts his attention, and which the old tramp weaver invariably looks for and expects to see, is a copy of the rules of the house, which ranks next to the rules of the mill in importance.

These rules are strictly enforced and the boarder, whether male or female, who refuses to be governed by them has no hope of industrial salvation there or in any other corporation boarding house. A note to the mill from the boarding house hos is all that is required and the recalcitrant boarder is discharged from his work and must leave the boarding house as well. Discipline is as much a requisite for the good management of the conduct of any other business.

As a rule the factory operatives who are to be found in the corporation boarding houses as for the conduct of any other business.

A fortnight after admission skin grafting was carried out, the skin used being that obtained from a young grey-hound. Several strips of the borrowed integraments were applied to the wound, about six inches in length and half an inch in width. After the lapse of some days the grafts were inspected, and all but one were found to have firmly united. In six weeks' time the boy was discharged with the immense wound soundly healed.

An Old Horse.

The oldest horse in Maine died in Bangor not long ago. This was the mare Kate, owned by J. L. Craig, and she lacked but a few months of being 42 years old. She was never sick, and on the day before her death was doing her work as usual, appearing as smart as a 4-year-old. When they went in to hitch her up the following morning, however, she was found dead in her stall.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The town of McConnelsville, Ohio, recently passed a queer ordinance. It provides for building a high fence around a saloon in the town known as the "Blue Goose," which appellation is suggested by the peculiarly bright color of its front. The fence will be placed there so as to prohibit entrance from any other than the front door, which faces the public square, the most prominent portion of the village.

On Mt. Desert Rock.

People who only visit the Maine lighthouses during a summer holiday, can have little idea of what life means to the brave men and women whose home is on these lone rocks by the sea all the year round. At Mt. Desert rock, for instance, the waves at times have washed entirely over the rock, and the keepers with their families have had to take refuge in the tower, but even here the keepers have succeeded in raising a few flowers and fresh vegetables in earth brought from the main land and deposited in sheltered spots. Sea birds lay their many eggs on this barren rock and they are never molested.—Lewiston Journal.

Couldn't Equal "Arizoney."

Old Judge McCorkle, of Arizona, when he left that land of legends, pueblos, "Gila monsters," and gold, took with him a large quantity of the latter. He sold a mine for something over two hundred thousand dollars. With this fortune the "jedge" repaired to the "bay," as San Francisco is called throughout the coast, there to spend the rest of his days in comfort. Having a wholesome distrust of banks, acquired from his experience of them in Arizona, the judge placed his coin in the safe deposit vaulis and has ever since lived on his principal, drawing on the original stock of twenty dollar pieces there whenever his purse runs low. When the judge first came to San Francisco, he was somewhat dazed by the rush and whirl of even that not too densely populated city. But with true provincial pride, he determined to conceal his feelings. It was this frontier hauteur which actuated his retort in the following dialogue. The judge entered the breakfast room in one of the large hotels the morning after his arrival in San Francisco. The waiter presented to him that long and involved document from which Americans chart out the morning meal. The judge regarded it apprehensively and said: "Young man, gimme some frijoles," "Beg pardon, sir?" "You don't, speak no Spanish, hay? Well, gimme some beans." "Very sorry, sir, but we do not serve beans at breakfast, sir." "You don't, hay?" remarked the judge, sarcastically; "you don't, speak no Spanish, hay? Well, gimme some frijoles," unge, sarcastically; "you don't, speak no Spanish, hay? Well, gimme some frijoles," unge, sarcastically; "you don't, speak no Spanish, hay?" remarked the judge owered his rich bass to an impressive murmur, "young man, I come from Arizoney, the poorest kentry on this here yearth; but even in Arizoney, we git beans three times a day!"—San Francisco Argonaut. use of Kur-a-koff. Ancient Egyptian Flora.

The national museum of Egyptian antiquities at Bulak contains a very interesting collection of plants which have been found in the catacombs and sepulchral monuments of the country. Dr. Schweinfurth was the first to study this ancient flora, which contains no example of a plant that does not grow today in the Nile valley. Nor does the most minute examination show the least difference between the vegetation that flourished fifty centuries ago and that of the present time. In some cases the color of the flowers can be clearly distinguished, as, for instance, the purple lackspur, the red poppy, the reddish brown saffron and the blue lotus.

The leaves of the watermelon contain grains of chlorophyll perfectly visible in the microscope. All these were found in great numbers in the burial places of the fifteenth dynasty, 3,000 years B. C., and in one tomb of the same time some cars of barley. In later monuments were discovered mustard, flax, cucumbers, lentils, pine cones, juniper berries, dates, holly-hocks, chrysanthemums, figs, olives, onions and grapes. Around the necks and upon the breasts of the mummies of 1100 B. C. were garlands of celery leaves and blue lotus flowers. In regard to the various specimens of grain discovered, it may be added that no attempt to make them grow has ever succeeded, the plants having been subjected to a great heat at the time of embalming and burial, which, while it preserved them, destroyed their germinating power. The cases in which mummy wheat is said to have been raised are due simply to the fraudulent mixture of modern with the ancient grains.—Exchange.

Eriesson's Three Purposes.

Setting aside minor inventions, three distinct purposes are apparent in Ericsson's labors; first, to improve the steam engine and scope of its application; next, to discover some more economical and efficient method for changing the mode of motion we call Heat into the mode of motion we call Power; third, to enforce the great maritime nations into calling the ocean neutral ground, by making naval warfare too destructive a pastime to be indulged in, and equalizing the struggle between the greater and lesser states. On the accomplishment of this last purpose depended, in Ericsson's judgment, the future of his native Sweden. Too weak to hold her own in a contest with any great power, under existing conditions, her only sure hope of defense is in neutralizing the dominating factors of numbers and wealth by the efforts of genius stimulated by patriotism.

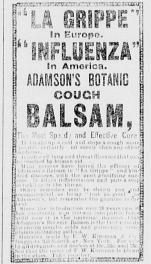

Love of country was with Ericsson a supreme passion. In this controlling sentiment, in the traits of char-

The dog, after smelling the meat, refused to eat it. Some of the meat was then cut into small pieces and concealed within bread. This the dog ate with avidity, but in twenty minutes commenced to display the most distressing symptoms, and soon died in great agony.

All sorts of meat, both raw and cooked, some grilled, roasted and boiled, were exposed to lobacco smoke and then given to animals, and in all cases produced symptoms of acute poisoning. Washington entered the presidential drawing room where the company was assembled to receive him, and took his place on the hearth rug. He was in full evening dress, an elegant sword by his side and a tricornered hat in his hand. The visitors were then individually presented to him; each one was received with a stately bow, but without any hand-shaking. The president then began at one end of the row of visitors, and passing along the line addressed each one and then resumed his proper place on the hearth rug. After standing there a short time he made his bow to the company and retired; the reception was over.—Boston Transcript.

FACTS ABOUT FOOTGEAR.

Phases of the Business.

There are more people wearing shoes than there are who know about the shoes they wear. For the benefit of the shoe wearing race in general and the wearer of fine calf skin shoes in particular, The Post has collected a few facts. A reporter met at the Metropolitan the other evening Mr. E. F. Sawyer, the representative of a big firm at North Weymouth, Mass.

"Washington," said he, "demands a fine grade shoe, and a good many of them. The trade is steady the year round. Take the heaviest firms you have here and their stocks will not vary $5,000 during the different seasons. There are so few novelties in the business that the holidays make no special demand.

"Your asphalt streets and sidewalks are very wearing on shoes. The asphalt is slippery. Every time your foot is set down it slips a little, and it tells in time on the sole of the shoe. Asphalt wears leather faster than brick, and brick faster than dirt. It is not always economical to black your own boots. You are apt to put the blacking on too thick and unevenly, let it dry and cake on and ruin the leather. Blacking should be put on thin and evenly and washed off occasionally."

sionally."

"How can I pick out a good shoe?"
asked the reporter.

"Well, it isn't so easily told. You have to learn by experience. You are probably aware that a calfskin grows tougher from the tail to the horns. It does; the fiber gets longer and tougher. The skin at the tail is finer, but not so tough. The skin is tougher on the sides than the belly; yet, strangely, right along the backbone the skin is so weak that it can be torn like a piece of paper. The lower part of your shoe upper is called the vamp. The vamps are cut from the two pieces of a calfskin, commencing at the tail. The cutter puts on his patterns and cuts one from each side, never crossing the back. Next two pairs comout over the ribs, one pair on the shoulders and one pair from the neck. The neck vamps have much more wear than any of the others. You can teil them by the wrinkles. These wrinkles, which were in the neck of the calf, are still preserved in the leather, and you can find them by close examination. But since the neck vamps are coarse and heavy they are never put in the finest grades of shoes. The belly of the calfskin needs tanning longer than the side; so within a few years the tanners have tried a plan of taking the side out when it has tanned long enough, and hanging it so that the belly remains in the pickle a little longer.

The Friend of the Paris Cat.

But up in the garret, in a tiny room, kept clean and neat as hands and whitewash and much soap and water could make it, lived another of the celebrities of the quarter, an aged woman who made her living by selling oranges, and who went by the name of the Mother of the Cats. She was alone in the world. Her husband was dead, her children had gone away to seek their fortunes. So the poor old creatures, with that love of animals which forms so touching a feature in the French nature, had taken upon herself the mission of feeding and caring for all the cats of the quarter.

She tended those that were sick or in jured, and, though there were days when she lacked bread for herself, she always had a big dish of scraps for her proteges. Against the wall of the room were pinned two prints, its only ornaments. One was a head of Christ, and the other that of Victor Hugo. Some one once asked the old woman the reason of her having placed the portrait of the poet beside the picture of our Saviour. "Monsieur," she made answer, "he, too, loved those that were poor and miserable, and prayed for them." The old tayern has been demolished, and the Mother of the Cats has been forced to seek another home.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Last Home of Big Game.

Spokane Falls is the center of the greatest game country in the world. The surrounding region is not only prolific in game, but it is about the very last place in the United States where big game is plenty. The geographical boundaries of this splendid game district are: The Bitter Root mountains on the east, and the Cascades and Methow range on the west. The game country of British Columbia to the north, northeast and northwest is also more easily reached from bia to the north, northeast and northwest is also more easily reached from

For Hill Climbers

For HIII Climbers.

The physical energy or force sometimes exerted by the human body under certains conditions is known to be astonishing, but no one has ever taken the trouble to put before us that force in figures. Dr. J. Bucheister has now made a most interesting calculation on the "work done" by mountaineers in ascending heights, which will serve as an illustration. Supposing a mountaineer weighing 168 pounds is making the ascent of a symmit 7,000 feet high from the point of starting, he has to expend an amount of physical force found by multiplying his weight by the height to be ascended. In the case assumed, a weight of 168 pounds, multiplied by a height of 7,000 feet equals 1,176,000 foot pounds; or in, other words, 1,176,000 pounds have to be lifted one foot.

This is work performed merely by the muscles of the legs, but besides this, the contractions of the muscles of the heart have to be taken into account. Its function consists, as is well known, in propelling the blood collecting in the heart on the one hand into the arteries, and on the other into the lungs. This is effected at an initial velocity of one and one-half foot per second, which represents in the case of an adult a work of four foot pounds for each contraction of the heart. The pulsations of an adult are, on an average, seventy-two per minute, but in ascending heights, owing to the additional exertion, their number is increased to an extraordinary extent.

Assuming, for the sake of simplicity in calculation, only 100 heats of the number is increased to an extraordinary extent.

Assuming, for the sake of simplicity in calculation, only 100 beats of the pulse per minute, this would give 400 foot pounds per minute, 24,000 foot pounds per hour, and 120,000 foot pounds for the five hours supposed to be required in ascending a height of 7,000 feet. The work performed by the muscles in breathing, by the expansion and contraction of the chest, may also be estimated at 4 foot pounds. Assuming, further, that the number of breathings per minute is, on the average, only 25, although, as a matter of fact, it will be found to be higher in a mountain ascent lasting five crage, only 25, although, as a matter of fact, it will be found to be higher in a mountain ascent lasting five hours, we have to add further work of 30,000 foot pounds.

The total work performed during five hours by a mountaineer consequently amounts to 1,326,000 foot pounds. In this estimate are not included the physical force spent in overcoming the friction on the ground, the exertions to be made in keeping the body erect at dizzy heights, and in dragging heavy boots and foot irons, nor the loss of muscle power in cutting steps in the ice, not to reckon the work performed in carrying an ice ox, or the physical force exerted in crossing fresh loose snow. Taking all these conditions into account, Dr. Bucheister arrives at the conclusion that the work done in an ascent of 7,000 feet, lasting five hours, cannot be placed at less than 1,380,000 foot pounds.—Iron.

Magic Rivers.

A sudden thaw in spring is a common enough cause of the swelling and overflow of rivers, but few people have experience of what might be called "magic rivers," which disappear aimost as suddenly as they are born. One such, however, is described by W. H. Mallock, in his account of Cyprus, entitled "In an Enchanted Island."

On a certain evening there was a succession of thunder showers, and then, all night, a heavy and ceaseless downpour, "This," said my host, in the morning, "ought to bring down the river." I asked what he meant by below us was rarely anything more han a dry bed of pebbles, just as it than a dry bed of pebbles, just as it was now.

But generally once — sometimes three times—in the year it would suddenly fill with water, flow for an hour or two, and again become dry and stient. I felt that the sight must be curious, and wished that I might be able to witness it.

About four o'clock in the afternoon a servant came to my bedroom and asked me to go into the garden. There I found my host with an opera glass, standing on the bank.

"Look!" exclaimed he, pointing, "it's coming. Listen! you can hear."

I listened and looked. I at last eaught a sound, faint and uncertain, as leaves rustling in a dream. Then suddenly, far away on the plain, I saw something flash, like the head of a pointed spear. Gradually this prolonged itself into a slim, shining line, which presently took a curve. For a time its course was straight; then it curved again.

which presently took a curve. For a time its course was straight; then it curved again.

In ten minutes, over the brown surface of the fields the water had stretched itself like a long, silvery snake, and the sound I had heard growing every instant more distinct, explained itself to the car as the voice of the stirred pebbles. The river channel skirted the bottom of the garden, and thus, as the flood went by, we had every opportunity of observing it. It pushed itself forward, headed by a mass of bubbles and scum; it split itself into fierce rivulets, which, a moment later, were drowned in the body of the stream; it gurgled against banks; it circled into transitory whirlpools.

Gradually, as we watched, its volume seemed to diminish, and in an hour's time there was only a trickling rill, over which a child 5 years old might have stepped.—Montreal Star.

A Great Corn Husker.

A Great Corn Husker.

We find the record of an Illinois man in an Illinois cornfield that so covers the husker with glory that the feat of the western husker is but as a lightning bug's competition to the electric light. Mr. George Levison husked a crop of corn in Piatt county which averaged about fifty bushels to the aere. The crop yielded 2,576 bushels, which Mr. Levison gathered in nineteen consecutive work days, or an average of 1314 bushels a day. This husker claims having husked forty-seven ears in a minute and thirty-seven ears to the minute for one hour. He received two cents a bushel for his work, which gave him good day wages. This tops them all. Now for the next.—Joliet Republican-Sun.

Over on Desplaines street is a well to do retail grocer who came here from Germany some years ago and has grown up with the city. Along in the early 70s there was a popular dye house next door to his grocery store, and in the backyard there was a number of dye vats and a great tank in which the dyer jealously guarded a good supply of soft rain water, in which he rinsed out the garments sent him to be cleansed. For many weeks the German grocer had had his eye on this rain water tank, and had thought how delicious would be a bath in its cool depths. One warm, moonlight, midsummer night the grocer looked into the dyer's backyard and the glint of the moonbeams on the rain water tempted him sorely. Along about midnight, without saying a word to any one, the German sneaked out of his back door, soap and towel in hand, cautiously scaled the fence and gained the dyer's yard. In the shadow of the rain water tank he disrobed, and then he vaulted into the pellucid water. The sensation was delicious.

The sly German splashed around in the water, lathering himself thoroughly with the soap, and chuckled to think of the consternation of his neighbor, the dyer, when he found his rain water full of soapsuds the following morning. After a while he hopped out, rubbed himself dry with his towel, jumped into his clothes, and climbed over into his own yard. He went into the house and, as he entered his wife's room, she screamed and called for the police. He looked surprised and asked what she was yelling about. She recognized his voice and asked where on earth he had been. He grinned and told her. Then she asked him to look in the glass. When he did so he fell back in astonishment. He was darkly, deeply, beautifully blue; even to his blonde whiskers and hair. The adventurous German disrobed and the dyer was summoned. He howeld when he saw the grocer, and explained that he had put blue dye in the rain water tank that afternoon. Chemicals were used on the unfortunate grocer for hours, but to this day blue spots can be found all over h

The Apples of Sodom.

It seems that the more testimony adduced as to what the "Apples of Sodom" are, or were, the less we know specifically about them. One who examined them "found them to be the fruit of a thorny nightshade." Now, nightshade is a very popular name, and is usually applied, botanically, to a solanaecous plant (Atropa belladonna), including among its common allies the "bittersweet," common night-shade, "horsenettle," potato, egg plant, tomato and their varieties—allies the "bittersweet," common night-shade, "horsenettle," potato, egg plant, tomato and their varieties—allies the "bittersweet," common night-shade, "horsenettle," potato, egg plant, tomato and their varieties—allies the "bittersweet," common night-shade, "horsenettle," potato, egg plant, tomato and their varieties—allies the "bittersweet," common night-shade, "horsenettle," potato, egg plant, tomato and their varieties—allies the "fruit and becomes enlarged and much inflated, by pressure will then explode. The apples of Sodom, therefore, do not seem to be allied to these herbaceous plants. Then, "the fruit of the osher," "ossier," "ossar" (peradventure osier)—which seems to suggest a kind of willow (Salix), of which there are said to be 140 pieces and varieties, varying in height from three inches to great towering trees—is said to be the famous apples of Sodom. If willows are meant they are not remarkable as fruit bearing trees, either normal or abnormal, although some of them sonetimes produce very singular sorts of gall.

Asclepias giganten is suggested as among the probabilities. Asclepidia-ce includes the mikweed family—the "wild cotton," as the species are usually called in some localities. Frem what we know of our local milkweeds, we can hardly realize that any of them should bear a fruit approximating the apples of Sodom.

The burden of testimony seems to be that the apples of Sodom are not "mereiva figure of speech," but a real or apparent fruit; but there has been some looseness or superficiality in their description or sci The Apples of Sodom.

An Opinion of Autipyrin.

A medical correspondent writes to The London Lancet: "I firmly believe that chemistry has in antipyrin found a most invaluable remedy for migranie and other forms of headache that seem to be due to worry and overwork. In those cases where I have tried it, its effect has simply been marvelous. In one case of a lady who for years has been the subject of most distressing periodical attacks of intense pain, referred to the occiput, which defied all ordinary remedies, this drug relieved at once, and in this case the depressing fear of impending attacks is now a thing of the past. I presume in these cases it acts as a powerful sedative to the nervous system, and happily leaves no ill effects—a great desideratum. Ten grains repeated every hour for two or three hours is my plan of giving it, and of then at intervals of six hours for a day or two after, to prevent all chance of a recurrence, this generally being at the desire of the sufferer."

Cold Food.

Eat all cold food slowly. Digestion will not begin till the temperature of the food has been raised by the heat of the stomach to 98 degs. Hence the more heat that can be imparted to it by slow mastication, the better. The precipitation of a large quantity of cold food into the stomach by fast eating may, and often does, cause discomfort and indigestion, and every occasion of this kind results in a measurable injury to the digestive function. Ice water drunk with cold food of course increases the mischief. Hot drinks—hot water, weak tea, coffee, chocolate, etc.—will, on the contrary, help to prevent it. But eat slowly, anyway.—Good Housekeeping.

33. "And in the synagogue there was a man, which had a spirit of an unclean devil, and cried out with a loud voice." After being rejected by His own townsmen of Nazareth, He came to Capernaum and taught in the synagogue on the Sabbath days. The first part of our lesson is the record of an incident that occurred while He was thus teaching one day. Then, as now, all kinds of people went to church, some with one object, some another, and then, as now, Satan went also among them. As far as we can learn from the Scriptures there is but one devil properly so called, the leader of all wicked spirits, whose other names are Satan, the old serpent, the dragon, the god of this world, the prince of the power of the air, the father of lies, etc. (Rev. xx, 2; II Cor. iv, 4; Eph. ii, 2; John viii, 41; but he seems to have associated with him innumerable other wicked spirits, properly called demons, and so translated in the R. lated in the R. V. margin; and the great business of the devil and his demons is to enter into and possess and control people for their destruction. A man possessed by one of these demons was in the synagogue on this particular Sabbath day while Jesus was teaching.

34. "Let us alone; what have we to do with Thee, Thou Jesus of Nazareth! Art Thou come to destroy us?" Thus the demon in the man cried out as Jesus was teaching.

"I know Thee who Thou art; the Holy One of God." On one occasion when certain men who knew not Jesus tried to cast out demons, the demons cried out: "Jesus I know, and Paul I know, but who are ye?" And the man with the demons leaped on them, and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they field not of that house naked and wounded (Acts xix, 15, 16, The devil and his angels do not know Jesus for their good in any way, but they know the state of the control of t against them, so that they fixed out of that house maked and wounded (Acts xix, 15, 16). The devil and his angels do not know Jesus for their good in any way, but they know Him as the Son of God, the Holy One, the Christ, and they fear Him, and they know and fear those who are truly His, as Paul was.

35, "And Jesus rebuked him, saying: Hold thy peace, and come out of him, and hur thim not." He addressed the demon in the man, and His word compelled the evil spirit to leave the man, and he was healed. "He cast out the spirits with His word" Matt, Viii, 16). There is no doubt that the devil and his angels possess people today, and through them say and do the fearful things of which we hear and read and which we see with our own eyes.

in leading others to the Great Deliverer.

37. "And the fame of Him went out into every place of the country round about."

His name is as ointment poured forth.

38. "And He arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house."

39. "He atom!

38. "And He arose out of the synagogue, and entered into Simon's house."

39. "He stood over her, and rebuked the fever, and it left her, and immediately she arose and ministered unto them." A little before He had rebuked the unclean spirit, and now he rebukes the burning in this woman's body, and as quickly as the spirit fled from the man, so this great fever flees before the same Almighty Word, and the woman is instantly well, so well that she is able to minister unto them, and she does it at once.

40. "And He laid His hands on every one of them and healed them." Tidings from the synagogue and from Simon's home soon spread through the city, and people sick with all kinds of diseases are brought unto Him, every one of whom is sent away healed.

41. "And devils came out of many, * * and He, rebuking them, suffered them not to speak, for they knew that He was Christ." How many happy homes there were in Capernaum that night; people now perfectly well who had long been sick and had suffered much, people now about on the streets and at their work who had not been seen there for many a day; people now meek and gentle to whom you could not speak before without being insulted; and all because Jesus had come. His word and His hand did it ail, and He still lives, and is accessible to all who truly seek Him.

What hungering for communion with His Father, what abstraction from the things of earth! But this is the secret of power. A hold upon God, a clinging to God, a waiting upon Him alone, a whole hearted reliance upon Him, a living in His sight, a witnessing unto Him that He may be glorified, a studying to show ourselves approved unto Him, seeing no one but Jesus only. Polished Pecan Nuts.

Salesman at a fancy grocery store—Will you have the pecans with the hulls polished or just the plain, common every day pecan? No difference in the meat. The difference is in the polishing of the hulls and the price. You pay two cents extra on the pound for the polished hull. Why? Because it is a fad. That's all. Some tolks like to have the polished pecans on the table because they look nice. How are they polished? Well, that is a Chicago trick. There is a place in this town that does nothing but polish nuts. A huge cylinder, operating on the same principal as the peanut roaster you see on the streets is put in motion. It contains a few pounds of brick dust. The nuts are put in the cylinder, and it gives a few revolutions. The dust gives the hull of the nuts the bright brown, polished appearance you see in these pecans. Some folks come in and ask where pecans come from. They come from the south, generally, but as good pecans grow right here in Illinois, near Alton, as in any other portion of the world.—Chicago Tribune.

The Buddhists in Burmah do not consider the question of expense in beautifying their temples. Here is a description of the new vane of the pagoda at Rangoon: The vane is about three by one and a half feet broad, and thickly crested with precious stones and lovely fans of the red Burmese gold. One ruby alone is worth 6,000 rupees, and there are several hundred rubies alone on this beautiful thing. On the tip of the iron rod on which works the vane is a richly carved and perforated gold ornament called the Semboo. It is somewhat egg shaped and a foot in height, tipped by an enormous diamond encircled by many smaller ones, crusted on like barnacles. All over this exquisite oval object are similar clumps of diamonds, no other stones being used for this part.—Chicago Times.

How a Knock Out Feels.

How a Knock Out Feels.

While I have never been hit so hard that I did not come to myself within the ten seconds allowed me, I have been insensible for a few seconds from a blow.

I have been dazed several times in the ring. Once I was almost dead from drowning. The feeling was almost exactly the same as when I was hit hard.

It is not at all unpleasant. I felt as if I were floating in the air, and I didn't seem to care a rap what happened to me. I felt no pain, and, indeed, I felt really comfortable.

When a man is knocked out he doesn't feel it at all. He suddenly goes to sleep and feels nothing. When he recovers he is dazed for a time.—Interview in New York Sun.

Life of Toads.

The persistence of life in frogs is very long. Spallanzani preserved some frogs in a mass of snow for two years. They became dry, stiff, and almost friable, but a gradual heat brought them back to life. Toads have been shut up in blocks of plaster, and then, having been deprived of all air except what may penetrate through the material, and of all sources of food, resuscitated several years afterward. Toads are said to have been found in rocks. Such cases are rare.—La Monde de la Science.

The Rock at the Mine Was Rich, But It Didn't Show a Color.

"For ways that are dark and tricks that are vain," remarked an old California prospector to me the other day, commend me to the average mining sharp. These fellows are to be found hanging around every mining camp. They all have rich claims located somewhere in the hills, and when a tenderfoot puts in an appearance he is their particular meat.

"I was a tenderfoot once myself, you see, so I know. Shall I tell you how I was taken in? Well, along in the fall of 76, I think it was, I met a chap in San Francisco who represented to me that he had a rich mine down in San Bernardino county which he only work that had been done on the mine was a shaft some sixty feet deep and a few cross cuts at the fifty foot level.

"I saw that the ledge was a wide one, but somehow I didn't like the looks of the rock and so expressed myself. 'Just prospect some of it and see,' said one of the men, which suggestion I proceeded to follow. After carefully selecting several pieces of rock from different parts of the vein I pounded them up in a mortar which I had brought with me and then carefully panned out the pulp, using a large horn spoon for the purpose.

"The men stood leaning over me during this operation, apparently as much interested as I was. Very soon the color began to show, and when I had panned the stuff down as fine as I could a string of gold dust remaining showed that I had been handling some very rich rock. I tried this a number of times, with the same result more or less each time. You will not be surprised then when I tell you that I took possession of the property and paid for it then and there.

"A ten stamp mill could be started at once, I concluded, and immediately started for San Francisco to make the necessary arrangements. Of course I took a large sack of the rock along with me.

"On arriving at San Francisco I invited a number of my friends to inspect my new purchase—at least to prospect the rock, as I had done, and see for themsetves. 'Just think,' said I, 'a twelve foot ledge, down sixty feet on it and $40 a ton rock and only $8,000 for it. Why, it's worth $250,000 at least.'

"A friend of mine present, a mining engineer, who had been pounding."

feet on it and $40 a ton rock and only $8,000 for it. Why, it's worth $250,000 at least.'

"A friend of mine present, a mining engineer, who had been pounding away at some of the rock while I was talking, said at this juncture that he had seen worse rock than that, but not much.

"What do you mean? I asked.
"Mean? said he, why, just what I say. Your mine, if all the rock in it is like this, isn't worth fifty cents.'
"This staggered me, of course, but I thought he must be mistaken, and prospected some of it myself and couldn't find a color. Soon we were all pounding away at it, but nay a color could be found. I then had the rock assayed and was somewhat astounded at discovering that 'a trace' was all the gold the rock contained.
"Well, you can just bet I was mad. I bundled off for the mine that very afternoon. When I arrived there the place was deserted. I tried some of the same rock I had prospected before, but there was no string of gold dust this time.
"I knew I had been swindled. But the same rock I had prospected before, but there was no string of gold dust this time.

"I knew I had been swindled. But how? That is what puzzled me. I was out $8,000 in cash, but I don't believe that this bothered me near as much as the fact that I had been taken in, and had no conception of how it was done. "Did I ever find it out? Oh, yes. This is the way it was worked. One of the men who stood over me dropped a pinch of gold dust into the mortar every time I made a a prospect.

"Knowing this you can see for yourself how easy it was to deceive me as to the character of the rock."—New York Herald.

That's Why.

Mr. Nesbitt, the dramatic critic of The London Times, made a curious statement the other evening. We were discussing American humor and he said: "American humor and he said: "American humor has a sort of stoical grimness, which can be traced directly, I think, to the intermarriage of the whites with the aboriginal Indians."

Now what sort of answer is one to make to an argument of this kind?—Eugene Field in Chicago News.

New Diseases That Follow in the Train el

The System of Manual Training New Being Taught in Boston.

The word "sloyd" has been seen in print more or less of late years in magazines as well as newspapers and always in connection with the vital question of manual training and its introduction into the public schools. It is an anglicized form of the Swedish slojd, meaning dexterity or manual skill (compare Norse word slogd, cumning; English sly). Of late, however, the word has been restricted in its use to denote a system of manual training, of which the best known is the so called Naas system, adopted some fifteen years ago in Sweden.

When this system was adopted at Naas, it was new only as a whole. The details had been worked out and proved to be beneficial by different persons at different times and in different countries, but not until then had they been collected and made into a systematic whole. The material used is wood, found, by experiment, to be the cleanest and easiest to work—a most profitable selection, as with proper tools it can be worked into any shape or form.

The purpose of the sloyd instruction is by no means only to give general skill to the hand, but also to stimulate and broaden the mind, and to excite a love and respect for all honest work; it is to be looked upon as educational, a thing which will help us all and generations to come to be more fully and evenly developed.

On the value of various systems there is much dissent; ut all believers in manual training agree to the following principles: The work must, 1. Interest the pupil. 2. Give useful articles as a product. 3. Promote general dexterity. 4. Develop the sense and love of order and exactness. 5. Encourage cleanliness and neatness. 6. Take into consideration the ability and strengthen the body. 9. Counteract sedentary occupations. 10. Progress methodically, 11. Train the perception and develop the constructive and inventive faculties. 12. Cultivate the resthetic sense. 8. Develop and strengthen the body. 9. Counteract sedentary occupations. 10. Progress methodically, 11. Train the perception and develop the constructive and inve As every pleasure in life brings its corresponding pain or bitterness, so it may be said that every civilized aid to existence devised for human kind develops an agency for introducing new ills to torment alike suffering flesh and the Æsculapian brain. The invention of steam locomotion, telegraph and telephone instruments, electric lighting and varicus time and labor saving machines, while adding so much to public comfort and convenience, have also brought into existence curious diseases, which form interesting contributions to medical science, although less interesting and more expensive to the suffering victim. Railroad spine or railroad shock, an affection unknown before travel by rail became so common, has been a familiar malady for some time; but one more recent is railroad kidney, a disease not unlike Bright's disease, but of nervous origin, due to concussions received on railroads. There is a disturbance of the general system, especially of the functions of the kidneys, the symptoms disappearing when the sufferer leaves his regular work. The over use of a telephone produces a curious disease, in some respects a form of asemasia, a volitional overstraining of certain powers, by which we perceive spoken words when we cannot see the speaker or perceive gestures or the movement of his lips, thus creating collusion of ideas, general nervousness and lack of self control. Certain of the senses are developed at the expense of others, the natural equilibrium being unbalanced. Telephone timitus, aural overpressure, is caused by the constant strain of the auditory apparatus in persons who use the telephone continually, the car becoming intolerant of the tinkle of the bell. The symptoms are buzzing noises in the ear, dizziness, neuralgic pains and in some instances a sub-inlammatory condition of the membrana tympani.

The telegraphers' cramp and the professional axinesia are of the same order of affections as the writers' cramp or the violinists' cramp. Electrical sunstroke is an affection that attacks those who are

A Village of Chess Players.

In the neighborhood of Halberstadt, in Westphalia, is the village of Strobeck, where chess is taught at school to every young villagea. An examination in the game is held annually in the upper form of the school, and the best six players, who, however, have to be victorious three times running, are presented with a chess board, and feasted for a whole long summer's day. The custom is said to have originated several centuries ago, when a recalcitrant priest from Halberstadt was sent into exile at Strobeck. Time hanging somewhat heavily on his hands, he instructed the peasants in the game of chess, and ever since then the game has gone down from generation to generation. The pride and giory of the village is an old chess board, which is kept in their board room by the elders of the village, and which then when passing through the village. The edge of the board represents, in delicate wood carving, the village of Strobeck, and the figures are of silver for one, and silver gilt for the other side. The peasants tell also a tale of how Frederick the Great once played chess with their must forefathers, but there is no tangible sign that the Alte Fritz has really added to the fame of the Strobeck chess players.—Once a Week.

Opthalmia photo-electrica is an inflammation of the eye in persons employed about electric lights, and is caused by looking at these brilliant lights a short distance away. A succession of bright spots rapidly follow one another over the visual field, and at night there is inability to look at light without pain and a profuse flow of tears; the eyelids are swollen and movements of the eye painful. This lasts a few hours, and is succeeded by a feeling of painful weariness.

The ordinary telescope vision is a disease by which the visual field is limited concentrically, and the sufferer can finally see nothing except that which is directly in front of his eye, this condition being due to lack of nutrition of the retina or to some disease of the periphery. An affection of vision similar to the telescope eye may also be produced by the action of quinine.

The telescopic eye peculiar to light-

The telescopic eye peculiar to lighthouse keepers is a thickening and enlarging of the bony walls of the orbit. caused by the persistent and repeated pressure at the end of the telescope upon the surroundings of the eye, inducing a chronic form of periosititis or ostitis, the eye gradually protruding, but not becoming myopic or astigmatic. The divers' bends is a new form of caisson disease, which attacks the victim on his return to open air, with nervous prostration. The cavities connected with the nasal passages are obstructed in some cases completely, while the men are at work, and in some cases extreme deafness has been induced.

The New Fiber Plant.

A new fiber plant has been discovered on the Isle of Trinidad which promises to be an improvement on ramie. It was found by an agriculturist named T. J. St. Hill, who has called it "maholtine," but whose scientific nomenclature is abutilon periplection. The great thing with this plant is that the ribbons at nearly all times of the year are easily detached from the woolen portion by simply stripping them with the hand, and therefore a decorticating machine is not required as for ramie. When it is known how readily the stems allow themselves to be deprived of their coating of bark and fiber it will be seen what an advantage this simple fact gives the new product over many of the fiber producing plants. All that is required is to cut the stems, which are fully ten feet long, split the bark from end to end without stopping, as fortunately the stems have no side branches. Samples submitted to London brokers were favorably reported on and were valued at from $17 to $20 per ton.— Chicago Herail 7 some cases extreme deafness has been induced.

The sufferers often reel and stagger like drunkards, and sometimes are affected with partial paralysis. Electricity has been used with success for the treatment of this disease. Civilized indulgences and vanities have also contributed their share of diseases that afflict the modern world. Tight shoes by compressing the nerves of the foot, have created "Morton's toe." Then the tennis elbow and baseball the foot, have created "Morton's toe." Then the tennis elbow and baseball shoulder tell their own story, while chronic catarrh is in a large number of cases said to be due to eigarette throat, the result of smoking the much condemned but still favorite cigarette. Invenitive genius is still at work improving the arts and sciences, and so the demon of disease, ever on the alert, will doubtless swoop down with his attendant ills to the end of time, keeping time with the march of civilization.—Cor. The ligaments which had adhered to each other by non use were broken apart, improving her lameness.—Lewiston Journal.

A boy in the employ of the Lincoln District Telegraph company, at Lincoln, Neb., stands out somewhat conspicuously. Having been sent to the depot with a message for a gentleman about to leave on a train, he arrived just as the train was pulling out. INFANTS INVALIDS

The Latest Pad.

Three young men, one of whom was Tom Howard, the famous leader of cotillons, came out of Sherry's at 2 o'clock on the night of Mrs. William Astor's dance, and crossed over to an all night oyster house on Broadway, where they ordered chops. Two large grills are situated at the very entrance, so that the interior of the room, for lack of any ventilation whatever, is always especially warm. I doubt if any sensible man ever sat down there without removing his overcoat. Therefore the regular customers of the resort commented on the fact that the three exquisite young men in the Howard group kept on their large inverness coats with the collars turned up to their ears, and also refrained from removing their silk hats. This was remarked upon as if it were peculiar, though the general impression was that the gentlemen merely neglected to lay aside their coats on this particular occasion through carclessness or laziness, But the real truth is that these youthful geniuses of the heel and toe, of whom Howard is a brilliant representative, have a large number of unique fashions of conduct, and one of them is that the hat and coat, on the peril of one's social reputation, be worn while eating in grill rooms. It is, of course, a custom copied from London. You are to eat, drink, break out into a profuse perspiration, and run the risk of pneumonia when you go out into the cold air, but you shall not even turn the collar of your coat down while taking a chop, or you cannot be a fit subject of one of Mrs. William Astor's subscription dances. It looks almost too foolish to believe, but it is a solemn fact that may be proved by any one who chooses to inquire concerning the subject.—New York Letter in Utica Observer. Doom of the Wooden Indian.

"The wooden Indian in front of our stores," said a tobacconist to a Times reporter the other day, "is like the flesh and blood red man. He is being sternly pushed by the white men.

"Just look about our streets. In many cases in front of the cigar stores instead of the wooden Indian we see the Roman soldier blandly puffing a Havana. Again, in place of the wooden Indian are those other familiar fancy figures of young men of the period, airy jocular and suave, with the invariable silk hat tilted on the back of the head. These figures are intended to give a light and pleasing air to the cigar store in contrast to the grave air of the Indian. For my part, I like the solid wooden Indian with his feathers and tomahawk. He seems appropriate.

"Some other cigar store keepers have supplanted their wooden Indians with negro minstrels in full costume, and the signs seem to be rather popular. Bound to Insure his Life.

Life Insurance Agent (out West)—
What did Mr. Newcomer say? Assistant—He wouldn't talk with me at all; he said he was too busy to think about life insurance. Well, I'll hang around his house to-night and shoot holes through his windows, and when he comes down town in the morning you be behind a fence in some vacant lot and put a ball through the top of his hat. Then when he reaches his office I'll drop in and talk life insurance again.—New York Weekly.

It is proposed to prohibit interments in the tombs under King's Chapel, a bill to that effect having been reported to the Legislature by the Committee on the Judiciary. The bill also provides for the purchase of the tombs by the proprietors of the chapel and the removal of all remains if the Wardens and Vestry so determine.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadel-

Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadel phila.]

1. "The people pressed upon Him to hear the Word of God." Our last lesson left Him on His tour through Galilee preaching the Gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people (Matt. iv. 23). We now find Him again by the sea of Galilee, or, as it is in our lesson, the lake of Gennesaret, and probably at or near Capernaum, where Peter lived. Most of our Lord's public life was spent in the near Capernaum, where Peter lived. Most of our Lord's public life was spent in the help of the was spent with feature of the sea of the words, yet had not wholly left their calling to follow Him.

3. "He sat down and taught the people out of the boat." Having stopped into Simon's boat, He meekly asis him to push out a little from the land, and sitting down, He from the beat teachs the people as they stand, an eagerly attentive crowd, upon the shore.

4. "He said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep and let down your nets for a dranght." Simon having kindly given the use of his boat, Jesus will now reward him for it and teach him at the same time many things. Simon had for a little season cheerfully given himself and his boat to the Master for His work, and now this gracious Lord and Master is about to give special work of Christ, but multitudes have been blessed for time and eternity by obeying Matt. vi, 33. If we see to His work He will sebe to all our needs better far than we could.

5. "Master, we have toiled all the night and have taken nothing." So replied Simon, confessing thei contessing their univaring ton and their present need.

6. "And when they had this done, they in-closed a great multitude of fishes, and their nets brake." Whether it be a great fish to swallow Jonah, or a smaller fish to bring a piece of money, or multitudes of fish to fill these nets, all are obsellent to Him who creat-ed them, and who also created Adam and said unto him, "Have dominion over the fish of the sea."

said unito him, "Have dominion over the fish of the sea."

7. "They came and filled both the ships, so that they began to sink." We are told in the tenth verse that James and John were partners with Simon, and finding that he had more fish than he could manage, he called his partners and they found fish enough to fill both the boats to overflowing. Our Lord Jesus loves to have empty vessels, and not a few, that he may fill then. When the woman with the pot of oil began to pour into the empty vessel was filled. When Jesus fod the thousands they did all eat and were filled.

8. "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord." This is the language of Simon Peter, as seeing this great miracle he realizes somewhat in whose presence he stands, and falls at Jesus' knees with these words. This is part of the emptying process; a deep conviction of sin as we see nurselves in Golds.

BEATING A BUNCO.

An Amusing Incident Said to Have Transpired in Lincoln Park, Chicago. An amusing incident Saut to Have Transpired in Lincoln Park, Chicago.

It's a curious feature in human nature that while a man will peril his life to essist a stranger who is being forcibly robbed, he will turn about and delight in seeing that same man taken in and done for by a "skin" game or a bunco man. On the next bench to us in Lincoln park, Chicago, one day, sata long, lean, lank stranger who had hayseed and onion tops seattered all over him to prove his hailing place, and he gave himself away in every move he made. Pretty soon a slick young man approached and extended his hand and exclaimed:

"Well, well, but how are you Stevens?" wellow as a solid to man a second to be a solid to man a second to be a solid to be

"Well, well, but how are you Stevens?"
"How ar' ye?" replied the man, as he looked up in a puzzled way.
"What! Don't you know me?"
"Why, your face looks kinder familiar, but I can't place ye."
"Can't place me! I am William Sectt, nephew of the judge of probate in Grassville! I saw you hundreds of times in the two years I lived with my uncle."

uncle."

''Oh, yes. I thought I had seen you before. And you knew me right off?'

'The minute I set eyes on you."

'How's everybody down there?"

''All tolerable. You live here?"

'Yes. I look after about fifty houses and stores here for a capitalist."

''Gosh! you must get big wages."

''Oh, a hundred a week."

'You do! By gum! but you are smarter than fox traps! Mebbe you kin help me to a bib?'

smarter than fox traps! Mebbe you kin help me to a job?"
"I think so. Indeed, I was going to make you an offer."
We were on to him from the start as a bunco man, but had no thought of interfering. "Hayseed" should take the papers and keep posted.
"How would you like to come here and assist me at a salary of $200 per month?" queried bunco after a bit.
"Je whitaker! but you don't mean it?"

"I do!"

"Give us yer hand on it! Say, I'll work all day and sit up all night for them wages. Say, will ye bind the bargain right now!"

"I will. That is, I"—

Give Children Plenty of Water.

For the reasons given, I advocate under all conditions a plentiful addition of water to children's food. In this connection I would lay stress upon the fact that, as a rule, small children receive water only as they get it in their milk or milk food. Alike in summer and in winter, it is probable that the fact seldom occurs to a mother or nurse that a child may be thirsty without being hungry at the same time. Certainly many a discomfort and even sickness in a child is conditioned upon the fact that it has been compelled to eat in order to get its thirst satisfied, and often has to suffer thirst because the over stimulated and injured stomach will take no more nourishment at irregular and toos short intervals.—Archives of Pediatrics.

PHILOSOPHY OF SNEEZING.

PHILOSOPHY OF SNEEZING.

A Short Chapter Upon the Convalsion of the Nasal Organ.

A witty Frenchman of the last century based an attack upon the snuff box on the ground that it was mainly responsible for the decay of that ancient form of politeness, the custom of blessing a person after zneezing. He contended that it was sacrilegious to bless a sneezer who had coered nature into the performance of one of her most invigorating functions, and that the benison was no longer in any degree the same thing. We, however, who know that the delironement of the sunif box led to no actual revival of the benedictory fashion, may appeal to science to throw light upon one of the most ancient forms of innocent superstition.

According to a rabbinical legend, sneezing, as a habit, is only referable to the time of Jacob. Before patriarchal days no man sneezed more than once; for the sufficient reason that the shock was invariably fatal. At Jacob's intercession this law was abrogated, but only on condition that all races of men should henceforth employ fit words of congratulation for the sneezer's happy deliverance. Whatever its origin—and it may be doubted if it ever had a particular or local starting point—the practice has, without doubt, been derived by the doubted if it ever had a particular or local starting point—the practice has, without doubt, been derived by the Christian world from the times of heathenism. Polydore Virgil avers that it took its rise at the time of the plague in 558, when the infected fell down dead sneezing, though apparently in good health. The Romans certainly made oblations to the genius of sneezing; but Catullus treats the infliction with gayety, as we find from the lines in Cowley's translation:

Cupic, tickled at the sound

Cupid, tickled at the sound Sneezed aloud, and all around The little lovers, that waited b Bow'd and bless'd the augury.

The little lovers, that waited by, Bow'd and bless'd the augury.

It is clear, however, that the Romans simply followed an established Greek custom. Centuries before, Aristotle had given his own account of the omen, and was so far refined in his explanations as to tell his readers why sneezing from noon until midnight was good, and from night to noon unlucky. It would be fruitless to inquire through what channel the practice came to the Greeks, for traces of its existence are to be found not only in the widly contrasted civilizations of antiquity, but even among the barbarous tribes of every quarter of the globe, Before Greece was a nation, the sneezer was blessed alike in the "Dark Continent" and beyond the Ganges. The ineffable Buddha himself once sneezed, whereupon all his priests exclaimed, "May the welcome one live!" Buddha, however, took them severely to task, and the right to say, "May you live, sir!" to a Buddhist priest is still a fruitful subject of popular contention.

Although sneezing is a purely in-small below this is the singuage of section of the composite of the compos still a fruitful subject of popular contention.

Although sneezing is a purely involuntary act, it is possible in some measure to guard against its attacks. In the case of a fully developed cold, the sufferer must necessarily submit to the infliction; but, as to the sneeze casual, it would appear to have influence only in a listless or weakened condition of the bodily powers. People seldom sneeze when their faculties are in full tension. Great nervous excitement will hardly admit of the relaxation of a sneeze. Hence we often find a church, a ball or a theatre filled with an audience ready to indulge on the smallest provocation. They are in the passive and recipient mood. On the other hand, a strong nervous concentration possesses the preacher, lecturer or actor. His faculties are grided up for the feat before him, and he can at least temporarily defy the draughts that make martyrs of some of his hearers.—London Graphic.

To the purification of your blood, for at no season is the body so susceptible to the benefits to be derived from a good medicine, as in March April and May. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the people's favorite spring medicine. It stands unequalled for purifying the blood, curing scrofula, salt rheum, etc., regulating the kinleys and liver, repairing nerve tissues, strengthening and invigorating the whole body, as well as checking the progress of acute and chronic disease, and restoring the afflicted parts to a natural, healthy condition. If you have never tired Hood's Sarsaparilla for your "spring medicine," do so this season.

THE STOVEPIPE HAT.

thing About the High Silk Hat—Its History and How It Is Made. History and How It Is Made.

The high silk hat—the plug, the stovepipe, call it what you will—is a comparatively modern institution. About sixty years ago the silk tile was introduced into England from Florence. Since then the stovepipe has undergone many strange transformations.

ence. Since then the stovepipe has undergone many strange transformations.

The early silk hat was a rough affair. It was so heavy that the English dudes of that time complained that "it was like carrying a bushel basket," Besides it was clumsy and hard to handle. It did not have the fine tapering crown which adds to its picturesqueness, nor did it have the symmetrical curling brim. Contemporary pictures and cartoons in London Punch give one a fair idea of the styles then in vogue. Thus, the cockney sported one kind of a high hat, the turfman another kind it he gentleman another; while the dons and undergraduates of Oxford and Cambridge had their peculiar style.

Then, again, there has been quite a change of opinion in regard to the wearing of silk hats. Some years ago the young man that wore a silk hat was a marked individual. His stovepipe became the butt of wit and ridicule even among his friends, and the target of the small boy. For a change of sentiment about the silk hat almost everything is due to the manufacturer who has made the tile a thing of beauty and a joy forever. Recently we had a talk with a prominent Broadway manufacturer on the subject.

"Yes," said he, "there have been great improvements in the methods of making silk hats. Now, what do you suppose the body of this one is made of?" at the same time holding up a glossy silk tile. We admitted our inability to answer the question.

"Well, the body of this silk hat is calico."

"Yes," You see there are two kinds glossy silk tile. We admitted our imbility to answer the question.

"Well, the body of this silk hat is calico."

"Calico?"

"Yes. You see, there are two kinds of silk hats—light and heavy weight. Most of the bodies of the heavy hats are made of felt."

"How is the silk put on?"

"The body of the calico or felt is first dipped into hot water and then stretched on a block. After drying the body is stiffened with a solution of gum shellae and alcohol, and afterward with a solution of varnish to prevent it striking through to the surface. A cover of fine silk plush is then cut and sewed to fit exactly the body. When the silk covering is accurately fitted it is smoothed over with a hot iron. The heat striking into the glue dissolves it and in drying connects the silk plush with the body. This explains why a severe wetting ruins a silk hat.

"The hat is then placed on a revolving cylinder, where it is polished with soft cloths. This process of dressing and polishing is known as 'veluring.' The glossy appearance comes from the application of hair cloths and velvet 'velures' to the nap of the silk."

"What kind of plush do you use?"

"The best silk plush is imported from France. It usually comes in three pieces—for the tip, crown and brim. The skill consists in knowing how to put the silk plush on so that the seam will be invisible to the eve. Down along the sides of the crown the edges of the silk covering are allowed to lap over. They are then pressed together by a hot iron and finished perfectly smooth by means of revolving brushes.

"After a hat is finished as to the crown and brim, it is lined with watered or embossed paper, and a strip of enameled leather is sewed around the inside edge. Then it is bound and banded. Lastly, the completed hat is wrapped in tissue paper and put into a box for the retailer."—New York Press.

Women Fakirs in New York.

Another class worthy of commiseration are the women fakirs, as they are called, who sell everything from shoe laces to baby socks on the streets. They have a hard time of it, as they sit huddled up in a doorway or stand on windy corners trying to dispose of their wares, which no one was ever seen to buy. A middle aged woman, on cold and warm days alike, sits in a sheltered nook on Fourteenth street kiniting infants' socks, while not far away a gray haired crone crouches alongside of the pavement grinding out wheezy and discordant music from an ancient hurdy gurdy. A stone's throw farther on is a swarthy browed Italian woman, her blue black hair coiffed with a scarlet kerchief; she invites the passersby in broken English to have their fortunes told by the pretty little green bird, who is believed by the ignorant to possess some occult power, as he cunningly extracts a slip of paper from a pile before him. The sibylline prophecy is invariably a happy one, such as, "You will get a rich husband," or some other equally gratifying piece of intelligence.—New York Letter. Women Fakirs in New York.

Burmese Women in Religion.

Burmese women are treated well in family and they are the equals of men in family affairs. They have their say in business matters and the only place in which inferiority is noticeable is in religion. The Burmese are Buddhists, and a Buddhist woman has no chance to go to heaven save by her soul at death passing into the body of a man. If she is wonderfully pious in this life such a transmigration may take place, and I note that the chief worshipers at the pagoda here are women. Buddhist teachers put women much lower in the scale of morality than men, and they maintain that the sins of 3,000 of the worst men that ever lived. There are about 200,000,000 women in the world and none of these have any other hope of immortality than this. Nevertheless, I am told that the Burmese women are more honest than the men, and that their business promises are to be trusted. They are not educated as a rule, and it is only lately that there have been schools in Burmah for women.—Bow Bells.

The Feathered "Cop."

The description given by The London Globs of the cariamas or soriemas, located in the eastern aviary of the Zoological gardens will amuse everybody, while it should not surprise any one. That there should be among birds a species which is fitted to perform among its kind the duties undertaken among its kind the duties undertaken among men by policemen is a fact for which all ought to be prepared. Why should not each variety of created things have in its 184 st the same sort of functions and functionaries, modified according to circumstances and habits? More than one pictorial artist—as, for instance, C. H. Bennett in this country—have shown us what remarkable resemblances birds and animals can be made to bear and actually do bear to man, and if humanity finds it necessary to have policemen, why should not the "feathered tribe" be similarly impelled.

The cariama seems particularly well fitted for the post of public guardian. He perambulates his cage with all the regularity of his human prototype on his "beat," and if at intervals he emits piercing shrieks which seemed uncalled for, he only the more faithfully carries out the analogy. This, no doubt, is his way of blowing the whistle, and when he does it in his cage it is probably from instinct or from immemorial custom. He has already been acclimatized in the poultry yard, where he faithfully performs his duty as the preserver of order. If two young cocks assault or batter each other he steps in between them and stops the combat "by a series of pecks divided impartially at the heads of both."

Inpartiality, of course, is an excellent quality in a policeman, whether he be bird or man; would there were more of it. The origin of the cariama is, it seems, lost in obscurity; but it is admittedly ancient and possibly he may be a lineal descendent of the judge bird of ornithological antiquity.

How the Bottom of an OB Well Looks.

There are thousands of people whe have desired to see what the bottom of an oil well looked like after a hun dred quart glycerine torped had been exploded in it. But no ordinary mortal could crawl down a six inch hole to the depth of 2,000 feet if he wanted to, and no sane one would want to if he could. So the curious oil seeker has heretofore been compelled to guess as to the effect of the shot.

An oil country photographer has furnished the desired picture. The successful experiment was made at Warren. The instrument was let down to the bottom of a 1,700 foot well, which had been subjected to a torpede explosion. When the camera touched bottom a bright flash lit up the cavity, impressing a perfect picture on the negative. A cavity fourteen feet broad and seven feet deep below the oil sand was revealed. Into this cavity, enlarged by the force of a glycerine explosion from the ordinary six inch drill hole, the oil trickled and accumulated, ready to be pumped to the surface.

A Cow in New York.

A cow has become a stock sensation in one part of town. Every night at 10 o'clock a real one, alone and contentedly chewing her cud, is driven into Fourth avenue from East Twelth street. She ambles along up the avenue in homely country fashion. Most of the boys and girls of the neighborhood wait up for the event. They take solid comfort and bubble over with childish antics in watching every move of the cow, and she returns the attention by mild looks from her big and peaceful eyes and a switching of her tail, just as in fly time.

"She's goin' to do her act," said a Fourth avenue car driver, nodding foward the cow a few evenings since. He meant that the cow was an attraction in a neighboring theatre. Baboons' Fondness for Goat Milk.

The baboons, always troublesome to the crops, have of late developed a new propensity. Mr. H. A. Bryden, author of "Kloof and Karroo" (Longman's), says: "Some years back some one baboon having come across the dead body of a milch goat, discovered and extracted the milch bag, and, like Eve, 'saw that it was good." His discovery must have been quickly imparted to his fellows, for the Karroo farmers began to find their milch goats riped up by these brutes solely for the sweet and luscious milk. The baboons, too, becoming accustomed to butchering presently turned their attention to the lesh, and will now destroy kids—and, if they can manage it, goats—for their flesh alone." As the author remarks, this modern development of a carniy-orous habit coincident with the in. liesh atone." As the author remarks, this modern development of a carnivorous habit coincident with the increase of flocks is analogous to that observed in the sheep killing parrot of New Zealand.—Public Opinion.

His Early Education.

A St. Paul merchant gives the following to a Pioneer-Press reporter as a reason why he cut a piece of goods in two and sold one portion at a high and the other at a low price: "Twenty-five years age I was a sub-clerk in a general store in Kalamazoo, Mich. The head salesman sent me down stairs into the grocery department to do up a pound of tea for a prominent social leader. In forty-five minutes it came back from the house with an order to change it. What does that head salesman do but shake the tea out of the brown paper, do it up in silk tea paper, tie it with a colored cord and send it back to the lady. It staid this time, and she afterward told me that that was the kind of tea she always wanted to fill her orders. That, my boy, was a part of my early education." His Early Education.

Last Friday the Cambridge strees schoolhouse received its American Flag and was proud of it. The ceremonies which accompanied the raising were interesting although not materially different from those of the previous affairs of the kind in this city.

The Flag was the gift of ladies and gentlemen of the District principally who for their liberality and kindness are entitled to much praise. It was an appropriate gift just at this time when school houses all over the State are receiving such presents.

The room where the exercises took place was handsomely decorated for the occasion with flags and evergreens and presented a very attractive appearance. It was filled with the people of the District and numbers from outside, all of whom seemed to enjoy the presentation highly. The gathering was presided over by Mr. O. B. Darling, and a National Hymn enthusiastically rendered by the children of the sellow.

How was exceeded by a history of the Flag by Master Warren Meuchin which was excellent and attentively regarded by the audience, and then came its formal presentation by Charles B. Darling, W. H. S. Class '87, and now member of the Junior Classa Harvard, whose address was appropriate, patrictic and very landsonely delivered.

LESSON XII, FIRST QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 23.

mit Verses 24-26-Golden Text, Luke v, 21-Commentary by the Rev. D. M.

[Compiled from Lesson Helper Quarterly by permission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, Philadel-

mission of H. S. Hoffman, publisher, l'hiladel-phia.]

17, "And it came to pass on a certain day as He was teaching," Our last lesson, con-cerning the miraculous draught of fishes, is recorded only in Luke; then follows the heal-ing of the leper, recorded by Matthew, Mark and Luke, as a result of which there came great multitudes to hear and be healed, inso-much that Jesus could no more openly enter-into the city, but was without in desert places. Then Luke says that He withdrew Himself into the wilderness and prayed (wrse 16). Notice the seven other occasions recorded by Luke on which Jesus prays (vi. 12, 13; ix, 18, 29; xi. 1, 2; xxii, 32, 41, 44), and let us all sincerely ask ourselves how much

So that here was gathered a convention of all the leading and infuential religious people of the land, and they were being addressed by this humble carpenter of Nazareti upon topics with which they ought to be very familiar, and of which the wonder in their eyes was that He should know anything.

18. "And, behold, men brought in a bed a man which was taken with a palsy." Mark says that four men carried him. His trouble was paralysis; he was utterly helpless, all undone, not a thing could be do for himself. Other cases of this disease are recorded in Matt, iv, 3½, viii, 6; Acts viii, 7; ix, 33, the last case being that of a man who had kept his bed for eight years. This man's physical condition was an illustration of the condition of all men spiritually, Rom. v, 6, 8, 10, to describe it as "without strength, ungoldy, sinners, nemies," and that was just the condition of those Pharisees and doctors of the law who were sitting by, but they knew it not.

in your hearts?" They must have been startled at having the thoughts of their hearts thus told out before all, and one would think that this would convince them that Jesus was more than man. If they were well versed in their own Scriptures, as they should have been, such words as these would have come to mind, "I know the things that come into your mind, very one of them?" The Lord searcheth all hearts, and understandeth all the imaginations of the thoughts;" "Thou understandets my thoughts afar off." 23. "Whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Rise up and walk?" Each was equally easy to God manifest in the flesh, but from their standpoint simply to heal the man of his sickness would not imply the same power of God as to grant forgiveness of sins, and would not have led them to accuse Him of blasphemy.

24. "The Son of Man hath power upon earth to forgive sins." And He will have them to know it. But who is this Son of Man This is the first time we find the title in this Gospel, but we shall find it about twenty-five times as we go on. It is at least thirty times in Matthew, fourteen times in Mark and ten times in John. It seems to be our Lord's favorite title of Himself, and is found outside of the Gospels only in Acts vii, 56; Heb. ii, 6; Rev. i, 13; xiv, ii. Of the eighty times Honest it has for the four Cospels, He uses it in reference to His resurrection and future glory about thirty times, and that reminds us of Ps. viii, 4; lxxx, 17; Dan. vii, 13, where the Son of Man is the one to whom dominion on earth is given. He has power to remove sin and sickness, and does it even now in the case of individuals. He removes sin as to its consequences and power from every one who truly seeks Him. He removes sin as to its consequence and power from every one who truly seeks Him. He removes sin as to its consequence and power from every one who truly seeks Him. He removes and and His glory, but not until the resurrection will He give His people bedies forever free from all infirmity. The time what He, the Quickener, Teacher, Comforter, would do for us, in us, through us, to the glory of God. By the Word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath of His mouth (Ps. xxxiii, 6, and that Word in which the Spirit dwells (John vi, 63) has lost none of its power. Turn a moment to the man and his friends as the return home in triumph, glorifying God. What a praise meeting it was; a true Halle-Hijala chours. And all because of faith in the Son of Man.

26. "Amazed—glorified God—filled with Injai chorus. And all because of faith in the Son of Man. 26. "Annazed—glorified God—filled with fear—We have seen strange things to-day." Jesus is the Lord God of the holy prophets (Rev. xxii, 6, 16), and if our hearts looking up to Him in childlike faith should say, "Ah. Lord God! behold, Thou hast made the heaven and the earth by Thy great power and stretched out arm, and there is nothing too hard for Thee" (Jer. xxxii, 17), we too would be amazed at the results of faith, and should be compelled to glorify God every day because of the strange things we would see. The empty would be filled, but the rich and self satisfied would still go empty away. The Lord gives us to see our paralysts, that we may in our helpfulness come and clarg to the Mighty One.

THE HEIGHTS AND THE VALLET

there were rocky places where feet must bleed;
There were nextul chasms where danger lay;
Through nights of darkness and days of need
Townsts tie peaks he longed for he took his way,
and neaver, nearer, the peaks of snow
Each day the climber in rapture drew, orgetting the valley that lay below.
And the valley friends who were kind and true.

At last the terrible heights were scaled; Alone on the desolate peaks stood he. In the moment of triumph his courage failed, Am his heart turned valleyward longingly. O, to hear the voices of Friends again, To clasp a hand that was warm and true! O, to love and be loved, and to share with men The little joys that the valley knew!

Come back to the valley of peace again.

Preserving Fabrics from Decay.

A Belgian chemist has, according to The Textile Manufacturer, discovered a means for rendering fabrics, no matter how delicate in texture or color, proof against the ravages of decay. The wonderful state of preservation which the head bands of Egyptian mummies exhibit is due to their haying been impregnated with a kind of resin. This led the inventor to make certain experiments with the substance extracted from birch bark, to which the peculiar aroma of Russian leather is due, and he found out that the green tar which was left over after the oil used in tanning had been extracted from the white bark of the birch tree yields neither acid nor alkaloid, and that in solution with alcohol it forms a liquid of remarkable fluidity with the power of resisting, when once dried, even the action of alcohol itself. This substance will, it is said, unite with the most delicate and brilliant colors, and render them imperishable.

With all his faults Louis XIV knew how to conduct himself as a great king; among his other qualities he was a master of the art of paying noble compliments. On one occasion he stood at the top of the grand stair-case to receive the heroic Conde after the battle of Seneff, 1674. The prince, then in his 16fty-fourth year, was troubled with gout, and ascended the stairs slowly. When he reached the top he apologized for keeping his majesty waiting so long. "My cousin," replied the monarch, "make no apologies; one who is so laden with laurels as you are cannot move quickly." In an interview with the celebrated preacher, Massillon, Louis remarked: "I have heard many great preachers, and the effect they produced on me was that I felt thoroughly satisfied with them. Every time I heard you I have been dissatisfied with myself."—Chamber's Journal.

Two Kinds of French.

An old lady in the department of the Ardeche, from whom I and a fellow traveler had been picking up some folk lore, ventured the observation: "Pardon, but I should like to know why it is that, though you speak with me the same sort of French that others from Paris talk, yet you seem to use an altogether different kind of French when you speak to each other." She did not seem to have the least idea that there was more than one language. Something very like it happened to us in Spain.—Notes and Queries.

It is usual for travelers to dwell on the utter desolation of Babylon, and to paint its site as a strip of desert especially weekegone and unfertile. But the eloquent gentlemen who dwell upon this aspect of the place could not have seen it in early spring. The date groves and gardens along the Euphrates are then things of beauty in their fresh spring verdure, and the plain itself is laid down with crops, Irrigation canals cross it here and there, and give trouble to the horsemen. No grass grows upon the mounds, and there are patches of the level white with the niter which is to be found here as in other parts of Mesopotamia; but the surface of the soil is on the whole green and pleasant to the eye. The glad waters of the river flow in the bright morning sunshine with palm and mulberry hanging over its banks, drinking in sap and life.

The great city which counted its population by millions and filled the world with a renown not yet forgotten, has disappeared under the dust of twenty centuries; but nature is as fresh and jocund as when Babylon was still unbuilt. Birds sing overhead in the pleasant spring air; butterflies flutter about in search of flowers; balmy odors regale the sense. It is therefore difficult to feel as one perhaps ought for the great capital which once cumbered this ground. Nature does not mourn for it, and it is hard to be sad at the bidding of sentiment when bright spring hides its graves,—Noah's Sunday Times.

Underground Voyages Near Boston.

Many parties have voyaged in the tunnel, underground, from Newton to the reservoir at Chestnut Hill, a distance of four miles, and the journey is an exciting and novel one. The water is about two feet deep, and the current runs about two miles an hour. Twenty millions of gallons in twenty-four hours is the usual supply. Manholes are placed at intervals along the main and a descent into one of them was made by the writer. A ladder leads down to a temporary landing of boards placed across the tunnel, through which the water glides noiselessly. The place was like a dungeon, and the light which the manhole admitted from above was speedily lost in the pitchy darkness which pervades the conduit.

The boats which are used in the summer time to convey parties of exploreers from point to point are provided

The boats which are used in the summer time to convey parties of explorers from point to point are provided with torches fixed in the stern and bow of the boat to light the way. The current carries the boat along, and poles are used to guide the progress. There is also a remarkable echo here, and a stamp of the foot upon the boards evokes thunderous explosions of sound that boom and boom like distant cannon, as the sound rebounds from the manhole along the main. One of the party sang a few notes and the sound was multiplied into a choir of mysterious voices, the effect being indescribably weird.—Albany, Express.

An Animated Duster.

One of the most enthusiastic collectors of rare books I ever knew was a young man—now dead—who was for a good many years employed as a clerk in one of the local railroad offices. He was a frequent visitor at my store, and would spend hours at a time rummaging around in odd corners in the hope of finding some literary curiosity hid away, and whenever he chanced upon some volume of more than ordinary interest his enthusiasm knew no bounds. His salary was small, and would not permit of his indulging his tastes to any great extent, but I was always glad to see him come in. It made no difference to me whether he made a purchase or not, for he was of great benefit to me in a very peculiar way. You see, books, especially old ones, will get covered with dust, and need moving around to prevent the accumulated dust from injuring them seriously. The consequence was that so long as he frequented my store he helped, by handling the books and moving them about, to keep them clean. This may seem a little strange at first thought, but you can readily see the logic of it.—Interview in St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Perits of Orthography.

I was riding through the country west of Pekin, Ills, with an organ and plano agent, when we came along to a school house one evening and found a spelling school in progress. We had three miles yet to go to reach town, but the agent suggested that we stop for a while, adding:

"If I can't spell the whole school down, then I don't want a cent."

There was a big turn out, and the master at once invited us to take a hand in. I had been there before, and politely declined. The agent, however, went into the ranks with great enthusiasm, and in the course of fifteen minutes had downed all but twelve. Then I overheard growls and threats and mutterings from half a dozen young men, and knew that he was galloping to his doom. Five minutes later there were only six up, and at the end of another five the agent and the belle of the school stood alone. The mutterings grew louder and more menacing, and I decided to slip out doors. I was unhitching the team when there came a loud cry followed by a succession of crashes, and a crowd poured out through the door. The agent was being dragged by the hair of the head, and as soon as well out into the yard they rolled him down a bank into the creek. I got out with the team by the skin of my teeth, and, reaching town, sat up all night for the agent. He came in about daylight, clothing in rags, eyes bunged up, two fingers broken, and going lame in both legs, and as he fell into a chair he explained:

"Before using and after using! I first downed the school and then the school downed me, and I'll be hanged if I ever spell another word according town when I leves the first mind by absolute inactivity; let it rest in work in other channels, and thus rest the tirest in work in other channels, and thus rest the tirest in work in other channels, and thus rest the tirest in work in other channels.

BLUEBEARD'S CASTLE,

It is still to be seen, and the Monster
Actually Existed.
On a bright morning in May, 1887,
I left Angers for Nantes, the metropolis of Brittany, writes Louis Frechette in The Area. As I was about to take the train, a friend, who had come to see me off, said with a parting handshake:
"By the by, before you get to Ancenis there is a station called Champtoce. As the cars pull up look to the right and you will see the ruins of an old chateau. Take them in well—they are the remains of Bluebeard's castle," "Bluebeard's castle? What Bluebeard do you mean?"

the remains of Bluebeard's castle," "Bluebeard's castle What Bluebeard oyou mean;"
"Surely there is only one—Perreault's Bluebeard, Offenbach's Bluebeard,"
"Did he ever live?"
"Certainly, in flesh and bones, as you and I, with this difference—that he was a hard case to begin with, and a marshal of France, into the bargain."
"Really? What was his name?"
"Gilles de Retz, a descendant of one of the oldest families in Europe. His career was most extraordinary."
The name was not unknown to me. I had read of it in the chronicles in which is handed down to us the marvelous story of the Maid of Orleans. But what could be the connection between it and the bloodthirsty hero of Perreault's celebrated tale!
This question suggested itself to my mind as the train bore me at full speed over the waving hills that border the Loire, and from one thought to another I found myself unconsciously rehearsing the different scenes, phases and catastrophes of the childish drama which grandmothers take such de light in presenting to their little gaping and shuddering audiences.
I could see the youthful bride, led on by curiosity, creep tremblingly, clutching the little gold key, to the fatal door, open it noiselessly, utter a cry of horore, and drop fainting at the sight of the bloody bodies hung in a row.

cry of horror, and drop fainting at the sight of the bloody bodies hung in a row.

Then the sudden return of the angry husband to the eastle, his fury on seeing the little gold key soiled with blood, his brandlishing of the deadly sword, with the infuriated cries of "Prepare to die, madame!"

I could hear the pitiful tones of the poor victim, during the short respite granfed her, as she called to her sister perched on the tower: "Ann, sister Ann, seest thou no one come!" And the lamentable reply: "No, I see nothing but the shining sun on the dusty road!"

And at last came the sigh of relief of yore, as I fancied I could hear from afar off the sounding approach of the galloping rescuers.

The vision haunted me till we reached Champtoce, where, sure enough, I saw on the right, as my friend directed, about a quarter of a mile off, the jagged form of a lofty mediaval tower which rose about a heap of ruins and a clump of stunted oaks, casting against the heavens its vast and somber outline.

This was Giles de Retz's castle, Bluebeard's home. Or rather it was one of his castles, for he had many, the whole surrounding country which bears his name (Pays de Retz) having once been his.

A Docter's Advice.

A popular physician was recently called on by a friend, to whom, in the course of conversation, he said: "There are ten simple precautions which form an excellent rule of life, and if people would but observe them I should have to resort to some other means of making a livelihood." He then enumerated the following: Don't read in street cars or other jolting vehicles. Don't pick the teeth with pins or other hard substances. Don't neglect any opportunity to insure a variety of food. Don't eat or drink hot and cold things immediately in succession. Don't pamper the appetite with such variety of food that may lead to excess. Don't read, write or do any delicate work unless receiving the light from the left side. Don't direct special mental or physical energies to more than eight hours' work in each day. Don't keep the parlor dark if you value your own and your children's health. Don't delude yourself into the belief that you are an exception so far as sleep is concerned; the nominal average of sleep is eight hours. Don't endeavor to rest the mind by absolute inactivity; let it rest in work in other channels, and thus rest the tired part of the brain.—

When the Shad Run.

The yield of shad is something tremendous. Mr. Edward Winslow, who in 1620 owned Daniel Webster's farm at Marshfield, writes: "We manure the ground with herrings, or rather shad, which we have in great abundance at our door."

In the early part of the century shad was so cheap that they sold for ten cents apiece. The increased price of shad has led to the belief that the yield has decreased. This is a mistake. It is the population that has increased, and facilities for transportation have extended the shad cating public as far as Omaha and Denver.—New York Sun.

The unprecedented success and merit of Ely's Cream Balm—a real cure for catarrh hay fever and cold in the head—has induced many adventurers to place catarrh medicine bearing some resemblance in appearance style or name upon the market, in order to style or name upon the market, in order to trade upon the reputation of Ely's Crean Balm. Don't be deceived. Buy only Ely's Crean Balm. Many in your immediate lo-cality will testfy in highest commendation of it. A particle is applied into each nos-ril; no pain; agreeable to use. ### To My Friends.

As you are well aware that I would not recommend that which I did not belive to be good, I desire to say to all who need a good, eriable, family medicine, that I believe one bottle of Sulphur Bitters will do you more good than any other remedy I eyer saw good than any other remedy I ever saw. Statistics Regarding the Soieldal Mania in Different Armies.

One of the most unique of the many branches of the government service is the compilation of mortality statistics for the war department. Human life, which the poets are wont to characterize as a brief "span of woe," or a "dream of disappointment," or by some other term which gives it a character of intangible sadness, is taken as a cold fact; a basis of mathematical calculation. Peopleare born and die according to fixed numerical laws which can be determined by calculation. It isn't a particularly agreeable thought, but it is true, nevertheless, that when statisticians have perfected their calculations in this line, and there is reason to expect that they will be perfected, a man will be obliged to die by rule.

Even if he commits suicide, his demise is tabulated among other cases which show under what circumstances self destruction is most likely to occur, and what conditions are most conducive to the suicidal epidemic that so frequently sweeps the country.

During the fiscal year which ended in June, 1888, there were nineteen suicides in the army, twelve in the infantry service, six in the cavalry and one in the artillery. This gives a ratio of only 72-190ths in 1,000. Only one case was that of an officer—a lieutenant of the infantry.

The suicide ratio for various armies whose reports were accessible was as follows: Austria, 1.49; Prussia and Wurtemberg, 7.9; Great Britain, 43; Italy, 42; France, 31; Belgium, 38.

This illustrates the fact often commented on, that the phlegmatic German, with his ponderous philosophic intellect, is remarkably prone to end his own existence. On the other hand the mercurial Frenchman bears up under the ills we have, and presents next to the best record in the lot.

Of the cases referred to in the United States army, one man selected drowning as his mode of exit, two preferred poison, one cut his throat, one severed the radial arteries, and fourteen shot themselves. Morbid despondency was the cause in two cases, suici ten, and no cause could be assigned in two.

The statistician does not stop here. He goes on to show that the ages were 25 years in one case, 27 in two, 28 in one, 30 in one, 31 in three, 35 in two, 38 in two, 40 in two, 41 in one, 44 in one, and in three cases the ages were not stated.

The month showing the greatest number of suicides (six) was November. Three occurred in February, two each in January, March, April, August and September, and none in the remaining months of the year.

In addition to the foregoing there were two attempted suicides without fatal results.

From these facts the suicidal tendency is strongest during the winter. On the other hand homicides are most frequent during warm weather, the cases being far more numerous during summer than at any other time of the

A Famous Collection.

In Professor Edward S. Morse's famous collection of Japanese pottery, which has been shipped from Salem to the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, there are more than 4,000 different specimens, embracing many of rare beauty, and the collection comprises the largest and finest ceramic art in Japan—as far as it can be shown in faience and hard pottery—believed to exist in the world. The accumulation is the result of years of patient search, and fifty-two provinces in Japan are represented in the various departments of the collection. In many cases the development in the manufacture of pottery in each province is shown chronologically. This grand collection is a monument to that indefatigable industry of Professor Morse with which hundreds of his friends in Maine are so well acquainted. — Lewiston Lournal are so well acquainted. — Lewiston Journal.

summer than at any other time of the year.

The record referred to above is but for one year, of course, selected at random, but the variation from year to year is not especially marked. It has been a pet idea of American lovers of statistical research to tabulate the facts relating to mortality for the whole United States, but the scheme presents many obstacles owing to the difficulty in getting accurate information. It has been demonstrated that the highest death rate is for children under 10 years of age. The causes of death vary from year to year.

The great difficulty in making correct calculations of this kind arises from the inaccuracy, unavoidable to a great extent, in taking the census. Instead of there being a natural sequence of conditions from year to year, there are enormous jumps in figures. The census, for instance, will show that there are 7,000 people alive at 19 years of age, 12,000 at 20 and then drops to 8,000 at 21, when in the natural course of things there should be a gradual increase. This, it is said, results from the carelessness of people in giving their ages.

The tendency in this country is to count the age by decades only. People often ignorant of their exact ages will, when asked how old they are, reply indifferently in round numbers. If a man has passed 30 years he will give his age at 30 without troubling himself to remember the odd years. Forty-five years will be the next stopping place. Of course these facts hold good mainly among people of limited education, but there are enough of these to very seriously disturb the calculations of mortality experts.

A life table is a herculanean mathematical effort, and its practical value after it has been prepared is limited, except with insurance companies. Statisticians are desirous of preparing a table of this kind for the city of Washington. It would be an interesting study, but probably of little practical use, except to show just when children are most likely to die, and therefore require the greatest care. Sufficient data could be

Never Lift a Grounded Wire.

It is always best to avoid danger if possible, therefore there is one rule which ought to be taught in every school in the United States, and that is, never lift a wire off the ground. As long as it is on the ground it is harmless, no matter what pressure may be on it. The moment it leaves the ground it may be dangerous. If it is in the way of traffic you can safely pull it across the street with your foot, then put your foot on it and hold it on the ground and it cannot hurt you, but do not lift it. Never touch a wire tied on a pole. It may not be dangerous, but it is like the unloaded gun, it may kill you.—New York Telegram.

A dealer in canvas back duck said the other day that there were very few chefs or caterers in town who did not occasionally substitute red head for canvas back, and he supplemented this statement with the cheering information that only about one man out of fifty is able to detect the difference. A pair of canvas back Havre de Grace ducks, weight seven and one-half pounds, are worth $8$. When the heads of the ducks are removed the difference between them is so slight that a great many frequent buyers of them will not buy at all unless the heads are in the place where nature intended them to be. The canvas back ducks which come from Lake Superior and Michigan feed on clery to a great extent, and their meat is therefore less fishy than the meat of the Chesapeake duck. When it is prepared, however, by a skillful cook, they can be very readily passed off for the genuine canvas back,—Pittsburg Bulletin. ASTHMA

Muscovite Spelling.

A recent order for Tolstoi's "Sevastopol" was written "Sir Basterbold." It is perhaps not surprising that Russian names should be distorted in this queer fashion, and the fact that orders for the journal of Marie Baskicirsteff should give the surname of the author as "Basketshift" illustrates the difficulty that prevails among our people of mastering the difficulties of Muscovite spelling. It recalls the story of a Russian general in the wars of the first Napoleon, who was reported by an English newspaper as found dead on the batflefield with a long word sticking in his throat. The inference was that he was choked to death in attempting to pronounce his own name, the misprint of "word" for "sword" not occurring to the lynx eyed proof-reader.—San Francisco Argonaut. But what was the trick? That was the question that puzzled me.

"Have you had this pocket-book in a secure place ever since he gave you the note?" I asked.

"Yes; under lock and key, where no one could touch it but myself."

"Are you sure that it has been ever since impossible for any one to find it and purloin the note?"

"I am perfectly sure of that. The lock of my desk in which I have kept it is one I made myself. There is but one key in the world that will open it, and here it is," he said, producing from his pocket a bright steel key, of very odd outline. "Not a thing has ever been disturbed in that desk."

The Mysterious Note.

I blooked through it, and examined a lot of receipts and notes that were packed together in one of its pockets, thinking that two of the papers might be sticking together.

"There is no promissory note for that amount here," I said. "But what is the blank sheet of paper doing here?" and I took up a slip of paper, that I found among the documents.

"I don't know."

"Who is the man that gave you the strong had Mr. Campbell left my office, than I hurried to a drug store, where so mass deed in with fading ink.

But there was another chemical sective which probably Bolton did now, as I had discoved it myself by accident. This treacherous ink, on fading out, leaves the zinc in invisible atoms in this paper, so that every line traced may be restored by the application of a certain solution of sulphate of iron and hydrate of calcium. So, no sooner had Mr. Campbell left my office, than I hurried to a drug store, where

I was a harum-scarum youth, and for a dozen years of my manhood had no settled aim. I started out as a clerk in a country store, then I became a school-teacher, next clerk in a drug store, where I learned my chemical mysteries; finally I became a law student; and it was my knowledge of chemistry—a science of which I am passionately fond—that gave me a start as a law student.

My shingle had been hung out in vain for four or five months, and I had not a single brief to prepare. What little money I had possessed after my l

LESSON XIII, FIRST QUARTER, IN TERNATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 3C.

The Peculiarities of the Quarter's Teaching and of St. Luke's Gospel—Some Ele-mentary Principles as to the Nature and Methods of Revelation.

Methods of Revelation.

The lessons of the quarter just closed deal with all the early part of Christ's life on earth and much of the middle part; they deal, be it particularly noted, with His acts rather than His teachings, and therefore the gospel according to St. Luke is chiefly relied on. To see the importance of this the reader needs, perhaps, to have his attention called to some salient points in the nature and methods of revealation.

perhaps, to have his attention called to some salient points in the nature and methods of revelation.

"God works by means" is a profound and important truth. The clouds and the winds, the beauties of nature and forces of the elements do not change their nature or laws a particle because God occasionally employs them in specific manifestations of flis holy will; and man, as a part of nature, is subject to the same divine law. Matthew is just as thoroughly an Israelite and Luke as much an expert in Greek, David is a poet and warrior and Isaiha a fervent, flaming exhorter to patriotism when God speaks through them as at any other time. And this is the perennial charm of biblical style; the writer of each book of the Bible preserves his individuality as distinct from any other as Tacitus from Livy or Bancroft from Macaulay; yet God's spirit is ever present in each writer from Moses to St. John, Matthew, having the spirit and yet acting as an individual, naturally set forth the teachings of our Saviour as they seemed best adapted to win over the Jews, and John, similarly, as an individual, addressed the church of his time; but Luke, the scholar, traveler and man of scientific attainments, as naturally became a historian.

Matthew concerned himself only with his entific attainments, as naturally became a historian.

Matthew concerned himself only with his brothren after the flesh, the Jews of Palestine, and quite naturally, therefore, only gave a thread of narrative sufficient to string Christ's teachings upon, and at each point preferred the teaching most nearly connected with the Old Testament, which the Jews accepted; Luke, as naturally, felt inclined to crowd into his narrative as many as possible of those incidents which would strike the attention of Gentiles. The position of Matthew may be likened to that of a native of New England writing on the history of his section and connecting it by constant reference with the American Revolution and adoption of the constitution; the position of Luke to that of a highly educated German or Frenchman pointing out to his countrymen the brilliant achievements of the American sa whole and urging the adoption of the American system.

f the American system.

In the primitive church the opinion was limost universal that Matthew first composed In the primitive church the opinion was almost universal that Matthew first composed his gospel in the popular language of Palestine—Syro-Chaldaic—or perhaps in Hebrew, and this but five years after the crucifixion. In modern times that belief was abandoned, and it was generally maintained that the Greek form of the gospel was the first. Finally, however, these two opinions were reconciled to this extent: that Matthew did compile a sort of "memorabilia" of Christs teachings, and that this (in the popular language) was the only gospel for near thirty years, after which Matthew compiled the complete Greek composition which we have. No such question could arise as to St. Luke; le was a playsician, the companion and fellow laborer of St. Paul, and doubtless a master of the Greek language, in which he wrote low laborer of St. Faull, and doubtless a mas-ter of the Greek language, in which he wrote this gospel and the Acts of the Apostles. So far there is no dispute, but as to his home and country very little is known. The earliest of the apostolic fathers confess that he "wrote not of himself," and that they are ignorant of what he was before his conversion. They believed, however, that he was a native of Antioch and was an early convert—one of the sevents. They also agree that he labored Antioch and was an early convert—one of the seventy. They also agree that he labored diligently to the last of his life, dying at the age of $4. His gospel was universally accepted as authentic by the fathers, and Irenaeus, Tertullian and others add that he receive the facts directly from $5. Paul.

The readers of the lessons just passed over cannot have failed to note the extreme clearness, simplicity and positive directness with which Luke relates the healings of leprosy and other diseases, the castine out of devils and other diseases.

ness, simplicity and positive directness with which Luke relates the healings of leprosy and other diseases, the casting out of devils, the raising of the dead and the effective re-plies to impertinent or sneering questions. He does not say that it seemed thus or so, but that it was so; he never intimates that the "possessed" was merely a lunatioor that the bystanders merely supposed that he was "pos-sessed"—he says with emphatic simplicity that the demons were there, that they spoke and acknowledged the divine power and came out at the command of the Lord Jesus Christ. To St. Luke the existence of a power for evil was an awful reality, and with it the fact that some individuals were "given over to sin and sold wholly to Satan." In these lessons the truth is emphasized in detail that a part of Christ's mission was to break the power of Satan over the bodies as well as the souls of men. Observe also the charm of the few refer-

Satan over the bodies as well as the souls or men.

Observe also the charm of the few references to the childhood of Jesus. Very little is said—just enough to show that as to His earthly or human nature He was a child to grow and wax strong like any other healthy child, but every word is golden. Who would be without that exquisite passage which relates his remaining behind at the Feast of the Passover and being found in the temple conversing with the doctors of the law! A curious fact in this connection is that the carly Christians often showed an inordinate with an intellect not utterly vitiated by prejudice and obstinate unbelief who will read the so called "Childhood of Jesus" and compare its puerilities with the sublime sim-plicity of Luke must rise with renewed con-fidence in the divine inspiration of this gos-rel

A Bird Without Wings.

A "wingless" bird would naturally be expected to be a remarkable creature, and some queer stories are told of one species, the apteryx of New Zealand, which has the rudiapteryx of New Zealand, which has the rudiments of wings developed even less than most of the birds called "wingless." It is said to make its nest in a way which scens very characteristic of its antipodean habitat. Instead of depositing its eggs in a nest and then stitting upon them, the apteryx first buries its egg and then digs a hole underneath it, in which it remains, and thus sits not upon but under the nest. It must be admitted, however, that this statement has been disputed.
Also, contrary to the wont of birds in general, the apteryx is nocturnal and devotes its energies entirely to a nightly hunt after worms. If the apteryx has no wings worth the name, it is worthy of note that it has a pair of very stout legs which allow it to hurry over the ground at a very respectable rate, and to defend itself by vigorous kicks.

Among the most interesting novelties to the traveler in a Brazilian city are the markets and the bird bazars. The market is ordinarily to be regarded as the pulse of the town. If it be well served, clean and orderly the blood circulation of the community may safely be considered as excellent, Judged by this test there are few, if any, coast towns in Brazil in which there is sound digestion. The markets are dirty, disorderly and unattractive. There are scanty and ill managed displays of meats. The poor live on jerked beef of inferior grades. Of fish there is a larger assortment, but fresh vegetables are lacking. Even the display of tropical fruits is disappointing.—Cor. New York Tribune.

Combustion in the Human Body.

Combustion in the Human Body.

The Comptes Rendus contains an article by M. Bertholet on the animal heat of the human body. Lavoisier, two first recognized the fact that animal heat is produced by combustion, raised the question as to whether this combustion takes place in the lungs at the point the oxygen is absorbed, or in a the entire system. M. Bertholet finds that one-seventh is produced in the system by reactions of oxidation and hydration. The absorption of oxygen raises the temperature of blood in the lungs, while the return of the carbonic acid to a gaseous state and the evaporation of moisture tends to lower it.

Ancient Lands Being Re-discovered. Such have been the changes of time that much of the world is still an unknown land, and we are now busily engaged in discovering much that was engaged in discovering much that was known before.

The valleys of the Missouri, Ohio and Mississippi swarmed with people engaged in business and agriculture; Mexico had a population much exceeding its present one; the ruins of great cities in Central America attest its former greatness, and it is certain that Peru, under the Incas, was the seat of a mighty civilization. Australia, however, has always been a sparsely settled country.—Golden Days.

Too many people live as strangers to their feet. In other words, the offices of the feet are not fairly appreciated. Let it be understood that in the bottom of the feet are the largest pores; that these pores should be kept open, and this by the agency of pure water, coarse towel and frequent change of stockings.

Goats Act as Shepherds.

In Switzerland and other mountainous countries the goat leads long strings of animals daily to and from the mountains, but it is in South Africa that it is regularly kept and employed as a leader of flocks of sheep. Should a blinding storm of rain or hail drive the silly sheep before it, or cause them to huddle together in a corner so as to suffocate each other, the trained goat will wake them up, and, by a method best known to himself, will induce them to follow him to a place of safety.—New York Journal.

Europe's Shifting Population.

Europe was settled from the south, and the very small portion comprising Italy, Spain and the islands of the Mediterranean sea were populous for centuries, while that we know now as France, Germany. England, Austria and Russia were forests and deserts, quite as barbarous and uncultivated as the present interior of Africa.

These were the countries of antiquity, North and South America and Australia being unknown. Yet the two former were densely populous in ages long ago.—Golden Days.

A Machine That Wraps Oranges.
An ingenious machine for wrapping oranges hails from Oneida county. It will wrap in paper 2,500 oranges and hour. It is compact and handy, 3 feet long by 3 feet high and 18 inches wide. The fruit passes from a cylinder down a slide, one orange at a time, into a wire cup, which opens and drops the orange on a square piece of paper cut by the machine from a roller, then passes through an aperture which wraps the paper and trims it, and then it passes on to the carrier. and then it passes on to the carrier. Unconscious of His Existence.

A Maine soldier, who was a participant in one of the battles of Sherman's March to the Sea, a fight lasting several hours, avers that from the firing of the first hostile gun until the battle closed, his conscious existence was lost, and he was never able to recall a single incident of the fight.—Lewiston Journal.

RACE HATRED IN EUROPE.

Neighbors Whose Dislike for Each Other

Is Constantly Manifested.

We know of few circumstances in modern Europe more disheartening than the depth of the distaste felt by its different races for one another. Their growth in civilization, which certainly goes on, though it is very slow, seems only to deepen their dislike, which, again, is increased by their propinquity. These Germans and Czechs of Bohemia cannot Jolerate each other, though they are not only intermixed but know that, whatever happens, they must remain intermixed to the end of time.

The Spaniards and Portuguese are lodged side by side in the same peninsula, under circumstances which would make fusion enormously advantageous to both, Spain gaining her natural capital and trading river, and Portugal gaining the force to keep and to utilize her colonies. Yet the keenest observers report that fusion is impossible, because Spaniards despise Portuguese and Portuguese at once dread and detest Spaniards. The Germans and Slavs in the east of Europe can hardly be compelled to keep the peace of Europe, while the German loathing for a Dane is as intense, and, we may add, as unintelligible, as the loathing of a Dutchman for the Germans. The Italians and the French, though their frontiers touch, despise each other heartily, and when, as in Marseilles, they are forced into industrial competition, they can hardly keep from blows.

The Slavs and the Greeks living in the same Turkish provinces, though they have the bond of a common servitude, confess to a repulsion they cannot conquer; and the Poles and the Germans of Prussia, subjects of the same crown and invested with the Horses as well as men, on coming in contact with them in the water, are not unfrequently thrown down by the shock. They are called by the inhabitants "treme-treme." In rainy weather those who fish in these rivers often receive a shock, which is communicated along the moisture upon the rod and line, when one of them happens to seize the hook.

I saw one in a state of captivity. It was about six feet long, and was so tame that it would allow any one to put his hand upon it, and would even slide for its whole length through the fingers. If it was irritated in the smallest degree, however, by no matter how slight a pinch, it instantly communicated a smart shock.—Youth's Companion.

How De You Wear Out Shoes?

How Do You Wear Out Shoes?

The nature of a person can be told by the way he or she wears the soles of his or her shoes. A sole and heel that are badly worn on the outsides toward the rear corners indicate a very passionate person, who is generally enthusiastic and believes in performing his duties very rapidly. Such persons proceed up the ladder of fame by jumps, filling the highest positions of the profession which they follow. Not working for money, they only care for glory, which want is nover satisfied. Such men were Alexander the Great, Grant, Bonaparte and others. How Do You Wear Out Shoes?

of the profession which they follow, Not working for money, they only care for glory, which want is nover satisfied. Such men were Alexander the Great, Grant, Bonaparte and others.

An even worn sole indicates an even going person, who climbs up the ladder of fane very slowly, accumulating a fortune as he climbs. Such men become our millionaires, but are seldon noted for their valorous deeds, A sole of which the toe end is badly worn often indicates a crook or other criminal. A sole worn on the inside indicates a person with very little ambition. Such a person is contented whatever his lot in life may be, and he cares very little for the outside world.

A Dog with Accomptishments.

This dog's name was Pere. His master kept a barber shop, and no doubt many a man dropped into the barber's chair for the express purpose of seeing Pere play his wonderful tricks.

He would sit up erect in a chair, wear a stovepipe hat on his head, make a polite bow, smoke a pipe, read the newspaper, and at his master's bidding he would he down "dead," then jump up and dance a hornpipe to a whistled tune. Walking along by his master's side he looked as demure as any dog you would see in a day's journey.

The cabinets of the larger Parisian dealers contain thousands of samples of eyes, all slightly varying the one from the other. Many of the French dealers, too, keep eyes which they loan out by the week or month, or even for special occasions; and there is a constantly accumulating stock of eyes which have been returned because they would not fit some fastidious customer.—Chatter.

Outcasts.

It is only truly high minded persons who are incapable of "taking down" their more fortunate acquaintances. Moreover, envy seems to manifest itself among children in quite the same manner in which it can be of served with older people.

When the squadron of evolution was recently in Boston, Admiral Walker invited two boys of his acquaintance to go on board ship and visit him. The boat was sent for them, and, with flags flying and in a state which filled their souls with joy, they were taken on board at a time when the general public was not admitted, and there were shown about with the greatest care.

During the next few days the amount of bragging which they did in the presence of their school fellows was by no means small. The other boys were willing to listen until all their questions had been answered, and then, boy like, they devoted themselves to taking down the pride of the favored youths.

One day, about a week after the visit to the strayeden one of the little fet. Queer Orders He Is Required to FIII

"No, not much, though sometimes half a dozen people, all in a hurry, want stamps at the same moment."

"Well, I should like to have your place, that's all. It can't be very hard to sell postage stamps."
"I wish you had it, as you think it is so easy. But, should you try it a day, you might think differently."
This conversation between two acquaintances occurred in a city postofice some time ago. The change which brought about a new administration removed the old postoffice clerk and installed another man in his place.
The new clerk entered upon his duties with a feeling that selling stamps was a diversion suited to his genial temperament. He hadn't been at the window an hour before he was a sadder and a wiser man.

window an hour before he was a sadder and a wiser man.

A woman came up and wanted thirteen cents worth of twos and ones, half and half, seven postal cards and a package of two cent wrappers. She had nothing smaller than a $5 bill.

When the clerk had recovered from the temporary slow fever into which this episode threw him there was a crowd waiting outside, and all he could hear was:

"Twenty-five cents' worth of twos.

crowd waiting outside, and all he could hear was:

"Twenty-five cents' worth of twos, please." "Package postal cards."
"Dollar's worth stamps, quick." "How much'll that take? Goin' to Canady."
"Nuff stamps on that, hey?" "Gimme two twos and three ones, will you? I am in a hurry."

The young man nervously counted out stamps, weighed packages, consulted the printed sheedule for rates in foreign countries and perspired freely. Cold chills ran down his back, for he had a vague idea of giving somebody seventy-five cents' worth of stamps for fifty cents, and of selling a package of postal cards for half price. The crowd at the window did not diminish, but grew.

A man finally came up in a great hurry and threw down a handful of loose silver and nickels and coppers and asked for—

"Twenty-seven ones, sixteen cents' worth of twos, two and a half packages of postal cards, and the rest in two and one cent wrappers."

The new clerk choked down a big word or two, mopped his brow nervously with a sheet of stamps, and began counting out a package of stamped envelopes, government official size.

"How many did you say?"

"Envelopes."

"Envelopes."

"Envelopes. I don't want any envelopes, Twenty-seven ones, sixteen cents' worth of twos, two and one-half packages of postal cards and the rest in twos and one cent wrappers. That's what I want and in a big hurry, too. Got to catch a train."

Does the Pitcher Plant Eat Meat?

Notwithstanding the admitted fact that bits of meat, insects and other animal substances are more quickly decomposed in the leaves and other trap like appendages of the pitcher plant, sundews, venus fly traps and various insect eating plant, than they are in open air, there is a body of scientists who deny that the plants themselves have any agency in the matter, or exercise any vital power in capturing the prey that falls in their nets. Dr. Mosted is one of these skeptics. He favors the idea that the decomposition of the imprisoned insect is owing to chemical action simply, and that the effect is produced in almost exactly the same way that a person is poisoned by coming in contact with a poisonous plant.—St. Louis Republic.

"But what is the matter?"

"Well, you see, they are down on Tommy and me because we had a chance to go on the Chicago when they didn't, and they are grinding us."

"Grinding you?" repeated the mother. "What are they doing?"

India, the land of poisonous serpents, immose, cholera and mysticism, has again come to the front through the recent discovery of a strange plant with magnetic powers equal to a Brush dynamo. Mars' Polar Caps.

Mars' Polar Caps.

The curious suggestion made by Mr. S. E. Peal, of Assam, India, in demonstrating that Greenland is covered by a huge ice cap, may have unconsciously solved an interesting problem in astronomy. It has long been noticed that the polar caps of Mars are not diametrically opposite, the southern one not being centrally placed over the axis of rotation, and it now appears that a like anomaly may exist on the earth. In antarctic waters are seen immense flat top bergs of ice 2,000 feet high and several miles long, which are evidently fragments broken from a permanent cap directly over the south pole; while in the arctic regions thin field ice preponderates, and bears out the assumption that the north pole is covered by a deep sea, quite free from islands, in which the ice finds no anchorage and is floating and temporary. Nansen's recent expedition, therefore, may result in proving that the Greenland continent underlies one of the two polar ice caps of the earth, and is giving a clew to the condition of Mars by showing a closer resemblance to our planet than had before been observed.—New York Telegram.
